10 witnesses called in Garrison trial; bloody footprint included in evidence

BLOOMFIELD — Evidence introduced by the state during the first day of testimony in the first- degree murder trial of Dr. Norman A. Garrison Tuesday included pictures of a bloody footprint and the tip of a surgical glove and a piece of a fence on which the bloody fingerprint was reportedly found.

Garrison is accused of murdering his former wife, Lee Ann Garrison, who was found beaten and shot to death in her home on Sept. 8, 1974 in Kennett.

Ten witnesses took the stand during the second day of the trial, including several police and highway patrol officers.

The bloody footprint was first mentioned by Kimberley Garrison, daughter of Mrs. Lee Ann Garrison, who found her mother's body. Miss Garrison said it was pointed out to her the day after the murder took place when she went back to the house to get some clothes.

Highway Patrol Sgt. Don Shelton, who helped conduct the initial investigation of the murder, testified he first saw the footprint — located at the bottom of some stairs leading from the bedroom where Mrs. Garrison was killed — about 5 p.m. Sept. 10.

He said that at no time on Sept. 8 or 9 did he see the print, nor was it pointed out to him.

Was he not surprised when told of the bloody footprint on Sept. 10, the defense asked in cross-examination.

"When I was first told, yes sir," Shelton replied.

Did it not seem rather peculiar that a print came out of the blue. "Didn't it amaze you?" the defense asked Shelton.

Shelton answered no to both questions.

Upon later questioning by the prosecution, Shelton said it did not amaze him that he did not see the footprint earlier because of the conditions in that area.

It is a dark area, even during the day, since the shades were drawn, the tile was black and the general path of travel was to the left of the footprint.

During cross- examination of Shelton, it was also learned that footprints in blood — found upstairs near the bedroom where the murder took place — closely matched a shoe worn by Dr. Loys C. Wilson, father of Mrs. Garrison who first examined the body, and that Charles Wilson, her brother, had access to the house. It was also brought out that no officers guarded the house between Sept. 8 and 10.

Dr. Wilson, who related how his granddaughter, Kimberley Garrison, came running to him for help and how he had examined the body for signs of life, said he went up and down the steps twice and did not see the footprint.

Highway Patrol Cpls. Lowell E. Cox and Jackie Crawford also testified they found no footprints, and Cpl. Frank W. Burkhead, director of the patrol's photographic unit, in Jefferson City, said he received a negative to be developed of the bloody footprint on Nov. 15, almost two months after it was found.

Shelton testified that the condition of the bedroom made it seem that there was a possibility of a struggle and that the assailant was wounded because of a trail of blood from the room down the hallway.

The defense pointed out that three types of blood (A, B and O) were found in the room, indicating the presence of three people.

Cox testified that an autopsy he witnessed performed on Mrs. Garrison's body revealed that she had been shot in the back of the head, but no evidence of a spent bullet was found anywhere in the room.

Cox also reported he found what appeared to be a part of a pistol grip and a surgical glove with a finger missing in a yard adjoining the Garrison property. A tip of a glove was found near the body.

The bloody fingerprint was discovered on a fence in the back yard of the Garrison house.

Kennett Police Capt. Lawrence Wake said that on the day of the murder he did not see any prints on the six-foot high fence the first time he looked at it, but Crawford called his attention to it.

Wake was unsure of the exact width of the bloody patch and print, estimating it with his fingers when one of the defense attorneys got a yardstick to see exactly what the witness meant.

When the prosecution objected, Judge Rex Henson warned the attorneys to calm down and told the defense attorney not to be argumentative.

Crawford testified that he found the bloody patch with an apparent print in it on the fence on Sept. 8. The patch was about four inches wide, he said, and was a part of a hand, not necessarily a finger.

The patch was dry and it rained about 45 minutes after it was lifted, Crawford said, causing it to get darker.

He reported the find to Sgt. Gene Duckworth, who was in charge of the investigation and who lifted the print.

Crawford said he could see no troopers or officers in the area prior to his discovery on the side of a fence post away from the Garrison house.

A minor discrepancy was revealed under questioning of two of the highway patrolmen.

Cox testified that he was on the Garrison grounds all day and did not attend an afternoon meeting of law enforcement officials at a local funeral home, but Crawford said he remembered Cox being at the meeting.

The proceedings lasted into the evening Tuesday after Judge Henson gave the jurors a choice of working or waiting until this morning.

P&Z board to take action on utility easements issue

Fences and other structures built across utility easements and what to do about them were discussed at the city Planning and Zoning Commission meeting Tuesday.

The board also held a second public hearing on the 1977 Community Development Block Grant Program proposal.

Discussion on the easement problem ended with commissioners asking City Manager Charles Church to prepare an ordinance for their consideration, saying that structures standing on easements, which are removed by the utility companies, are the owners' responsibility and will not be replaced by the utility.

Representatives of Southwestern Bell Telephone and Associated Natural Gas Co. told the commissioners that their firms face problems in getting onto their easements because property owners have told city officials that they have had problems, too.

A representative of the telephone company said his firm tries to replace the structure it has had to remove in order to get onto the easement, but call it an unnecessary expense.

Church said the Board of Municipal Utilities does not replace the structures it has had to remove, on the grounds that the structures were placed on the easement by the property owner, who should have known that the utility would have to get into the area at some time.

Commissioner Glenn Greene said the problem arises because people want to take care of the easement so it does not overgrow with weeds or else they want to use the additional land for yard space. He said they often forget there are utility lines running through that area which may need to be worked on.

The commission held a public hearing on the city's application for a $500,000 community development grant.

Proposals advanced by the Community Development Citizens Advisory Committee include housing rehabilitation, demolition and street and storm sewer work in low and moderate income areas.

The commission Tuesday night recommended adding two more projects to the proposal — a possible shelter house and recreation equipment at the Roberta Rowe park and sanitary sewers west of Alabama Street between North Street and Compress Road.

The housing rehabilitation and demolition programs will be cut back to free funds for the additional programs.

The shelter house and playground equipment would cost about $7,000.

The sanitary sewer line would cost about $3,000. The area just below the hill west of Alabama Street is the only area in Sikeston not served by sewers.

Church told the commissioners that two other projects suggested at the first public hearing — resurfacing of Murray Lane and North Ingram Street — would have trouble getting approval from the Department of Housing and Urban Development because the projects do not serve enough low to moderate income groups.

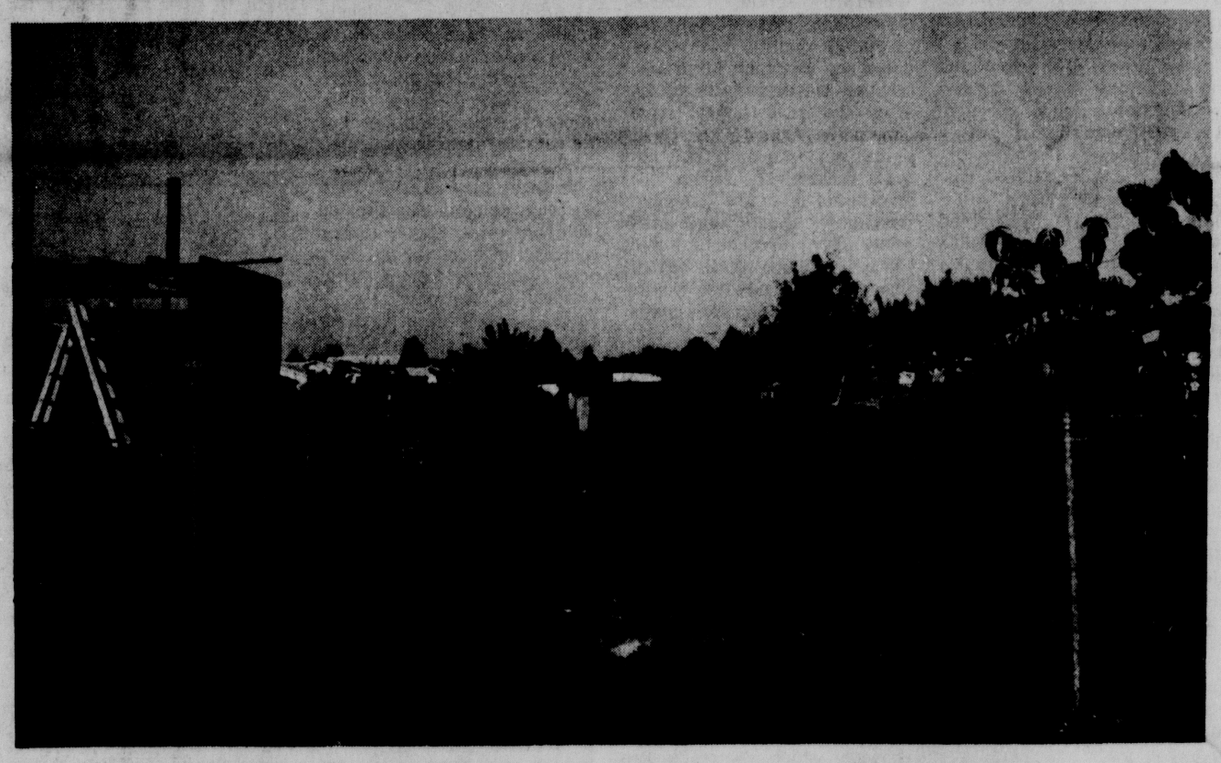
The resurfacing of Murray Lane, from South Main Street to Malcolm Street, would cost $142,200. Resurfacing North Ingram Street, from Linn Street to the city limits, would cost $172,800.

Other projects included in the grant proposal include: resurfacing Kiwanis Street from Malone Avenue to Murray Lane; Ables Road, from Marian Avenue to South Ingram Street; and Lillian Drive, from Smith Street to Applegate Street.

Additional storm sewer work on Applegate Street is included, as is an addition to the Heritage House dining room and funding for a transportation system for the elderly.

While the city is eligible for up to $500,000 in funds, Church said there is no guarantee Sikeston will receive any of the money. He pointed out that Sikeston was just one of three cities in eastern Missouri to recieve a second year of funding under the program.

Sikeston received $386,000 this year for housing rehabilitation, storm sewers and street construction. In the first year of the program, Sikeston received only $60,000 for housing rehabilitation.



Wrong and right use of easements

Two locations in the southeast section of Sikeston are good examples of the way utility easements should and should not be used. Between Cambridge Drive and South Ingram Street (top photo), a fence, utility shed and shrubbery all are located in the easement. All three would probably need to be removed if the utility lines were worked on. Fences run along easement lines between two lots west of Pine Street and south of Crescent Drive (bottom photo) and would not have to be removed if work was done along the easement. The Planning and Zoning Commission discussed the easement problem Tuesday night.

Joe Cravens, former Sikeston mayor, dies

Joseph M. Cravens, 58, of 6 Beaird Drive, a former Sikeston mayor, died at 4 p.m. Tuesday in Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

He was born Oct. 9, 1918 to the late Monroe and Zelma Ross Cravens of Sikeston.

He was mayor of Sikeston from 1950 to 1953. He retired from the United States Air Force as major in January 1967 after 28 years. He also served in the Sikeston unit of the Missouri National Guard.

He joined Fabick Tractor Co. in St. Louis following his retirement from the Air Force and was employed by the firm for five years until retiring in 1972.

He was a member of the First United Methodist Church.

Survivors include his widow, Joann Proffer Cravens; one son, First Lt. Michael Alan Cravens, stationed at Malmstrom Air Force Base in Great Falls, Mont.; one daughter, Annette Cravens Hackmeyer of Ballwin; one sister, Mrs. Ida Louise Hill of Sikeston; and one grandson.

Friends may call after 4 p.m. Thursday at Crews-Welsh Funeral Home where services will be at 2 p.m. Friday with the Rev. Dr. Arthur Fulbright, pastor of First United Methodist Church, officiating.

Burial will be in Sikeston City Cemetery.

Radio, TV equipment stolen

A CB radio, a tape player and a television and camera equipment were taken in three thefts Tuesday, according to the Department of Public Safety.

William Stokes Jr., 125 W. Gladys St., told officers that a CB valued at $130 and a lock mount valued at $13 were taken from his car between 1:15 p.m. and 3:45 p.m. Tuesday while it was parked on the east side of Sikeston High School.

Teresa Diana Smith, 108 Broadway, reported the theft of a tape player worth $100 from her car between 5 p.m. and 9:10 p.m. while the car was parked in the rear of T.G.&Y in the Kingsway Mall.

Ronald Dashiell of Cape Girardeau, reported the theft of a camera valued at $300, a camera worth $30, an electronic flash valued at $31, three lenses worth $350 and a portable black and white television set with AM and FM radio worth $170.

The items were taken from his car between 2 p.m. and 2:10 p.m. while the car was parked in the Homestead Distributing Co. parking lot.

Steele man shot to death

HOLLAND, Mo. (AP) — Albert L. Hill, 56, of rural Steele was shot to death Tuesday near here, the Pemiscot County Sheriff's Office said.

Hill was shot at close range about 9:30 p.m. with a singebarrel 12-gauge shotgun, police said. Police have a suspect in custody, but no motive in the shooting.

Holland is located in Missouri's Bootheel.

Judge orders new jurors panel

NEW MADRID — The panel of jurors and alternates that had been drawn to serve during the September term of the New Madrid County Circuit Court has been quashed by Judge William L. Ragland, and a new panel has been selected.

The action was taken primarily because many of the panel members were not showing up for duty.

Judge Ragland explained that some problems had been encountered by using the county voter registration list form which the members were drawn.

In some cases, he said, persons maintain their voter registration in the county but do not live there. Some registered voters have moved but have not yet been stricken from the registration list for failure to vote either in two consecutive general or primary elections or for four consecutive years, he added.

A number of the panel members have been found to be ill or totally disabled and some are under 21 or over 65 -years- old.

In order to continue to use the voter registration list, Judge Ragland said the procedure will be changed. A qualifying questionnaire will be sent out to the registered voters and then the panel will be drawn from those who meet the qualifications for jury duty.

The new panel of jurors and alternates selected Monday, by townships, include:

Big Prairie: Wanda Pearson and Jessie Lee Hawkins, jurors; Marie A. Eby and Frank Grimm, alternates.

Como: Gary Fletcher, Curtis Lape, Jettie Mae Daniel and Sondra K. Lacewell, jurors; James E. Hawkins, Eugene Williams, Chlora Gilmer and Murphy Young, alternates.

Hough: Tommy Branum Sr., juror; Alma W. Pace, alternate.

LaFont: Bobby G. Ray, juror; Richard G. Scherer, alternate.

LeSieur: Samuel E. LaFont, juror; Nadine Holloman, alternate.

Lewis: J. C. Bratcher and Geraldine Whitfield, jurors; James Sullenger and Rosannah Rodman, alternates.

New Madrid: Gloria Taylor, James Wade, Russell Krebs and George McVay, jurors; Jimmy Tollison, Mary Lois Davis, Anthony Fowler and Needa Gist, alternates.

Portage: William M. Fortner Jr., Billy W. Kellams, Cleo Saalwaechter and Evans Baker, jurors; Rayvon Knapp, Elsie Watson, Leo Deprow and Carroll LeSieur, alternates.

St. John: Dorothy Dismuke, juror; George Banks Jr., alternate.

West: Ronald D. Dickerson and James Kindle, jurors; Marvin F. Chambers and Virginia Bond, alternates.

MORE MILITARY WARNINGS

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld gave forth the other day with a few more of the military facts of life which are causing so much anxiety to people who take the Soviet threat to his country seriously.

Meeting with reporters at the Pentagon, Rumsfeld brought them up to date on Soviet missile developments since his report to Congress last January.

Rumsfeld said the Soviets are pressing ahead with aggressive programs of unprecedented scope to develop both ICBMs and submarine- launched missiles. The development of multiple warhead missiles, according to Rumsfeld, has proceeded "at a little faster deployment rate than anticipated in January." Additionally, he said that the Soviet ICBM force now has deployed 100 of the huge SS-18 ICBMs, which can hurl a 15,000 pound warhead, with up to eight independently targeted warheads, between continents.

Even if a SALT II strategic arms limitation treaty is signed with the Soviets, according to Rumsfeld it will not prevent the Soviets from achieving more nuclear striking power than the U.S. This is because the Soviets could achieve an imbalance of power with the U.S. by combining weapons permitted within its limits and "gray area" weapons which are not included in the treaty's limitations.

Most significantly, Rumsfeld reported that the Soviets have a steady building program "which could carry them toward a capability in excess of that needed merely to deter nuclear war." Asked why, he replied that "they are clearly striving not to be on the losing side" in any nuclear war.

What the Secretary of Defense was saying, in other words, is that Russia is aiming for a first- strike capability which will allow her to fight and win a nuclear war against the United States.

So the warnings keep coming. Is the message getting through, America? If it doesn't, our present domestic debates may become only pages in history books, whose future chapters will be written by the new communist world rulers.

"It is beauty that begins to please, and tenderness that completes the charm."

THIS CAMPAIGN HAS BECOME A DISGRACE

It's a good thing the candidates have one more debate coming up. They desperately need this final joint appearance on a national forum to attempt to redeem what has degenerated into one of the most unappetizing and unedifying presidential contests in many years.

For a while it appeared to be less a question of which candidate would win the election than which one would lose it; less a question of which man would persuade a majority of Americans to vote for him for president than which one would most effectively talk himself out of the job.

In the beginning, Jimmy Carter had the field to himself, with his ethnic purity remark and Playboy magazine confession. But then everything suddenly changed and the tone of the campaign has been getting lower and lower ever since.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz found himself the real butt of a "joke" he told, and Gerald Ford showed he could shoot from the lip as well as any man with his astounding announcement that the Soviet Union does not dominate Eastern Europe— er, that is, what I meant to say was...

This was like found money to Jimmy Carter. Never having been comfortable when pressed for the specifics of what he proposed for the nation in the next four years, he immediately seized upon the Ford gaffe and has been playing it for all it is worth, especially among ethnic Americans.

Yet while he condemns the President's remark as irresponsible, it does not seem to occur to Carter that it is even more irresponsible to him to suggest that a Carter administration could do any more to help the Poles, Czechs, Lithuanians and others than any previous administration has been able to do.

The Ford camp, of course, is far from having to concede second place in this game.

The President tried his best, for example, to have everyone believe that his opponent advocated confiscating the incomes of everyone earning over $14,000 and redistributing them to everyone earning less than $13,999.

He has taken an eminently sensible Carter suggestion that the purely business and profit-making activities of churches and religious groups be taxed and attempted to distort it into an attack on religion by Carter.

To borrow a word Jimmy Carter uses to describe everything he can saddle his opponent with, this campaign has become a disgrace.

No wonder so many people are taking the advice retired diplomat Averell Harriman gave Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev the other day: Don't pay any attention to anything the American candidates say.

Again the monuments of ancient Egypt are a jeopardy. The water supply that feeds the Everglades is in danger of being further reduced. Air pollution and man's tinkering with the Adriatic tides are threatening the treasures of Venice.

The villain is man and the toll is being inflicted on both nature and the relics of human history. Greed is a part of it. So is the relentless development of the resources of the earth that are needed to sustain life and to create more abundance.

The worldwide effort to rescue Abu Simbel from the rising waters of the Nile reached epic proportions. That enormous undertaking was completed before the two great temples of Ramses II were drowned behind the Aswan Dam. Now a different problem has emerged, although it is a result of the dam.

Aswan, along with prous soil, seepage and irrigation, has caused the underground water table to rise several feet downstream at Luxor, where there is clustered perhaps the richest collection of antiquities to be found anywhere. The latest threat is to the huge statues known as the Colossi of Memmon, which have dazzled viewers for 3000 years.

The problem at the Everglades, the last subtropical oasis remaining in the 48 contiguous states, is the reverse—too little instead of too much water. The Everglades is one of the most glittering jewels in the National Park System. Its survival depends on water and there is less and less of it all the time.

The normal flow has been altered by extensive drainage canals to speed the runoff to the sea. The White House blocked a new airport which would have reduced the supply substantially. Now many swamps to the north are being drained to make way for agriculture.

The twin perils of Venice continue to grow, as pollution eats into stone and bronze and the eroding tides cause the islands to sink. Egypt, the Everglades and Venice are only three examples of what has become a worldwide threat to natural and man-made treasures that are properly a part of the inheritance of the whole human race.

No easy solutions exist. But unless man shows more discretion, and a deeper concern, the price of "progress" will be the destruction of that inheritance. Sensible people realize it is too great a price to pay.

The unanimous decision by the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, covering much of the Middle West, should place school boards in every section of the country on notice that it is not their function or right to remove books from school library shelves which, for some reason, displease them.

In sporadic bursts of ideological or literary censorship, school boards—including, most recently, one in Suffolk County, N.Y.—have acted as midnight librarians, furtively cleaning up the stacks after the professionals have gone home. Armed with lists of books they frequently had not read themselves, except for spotchecks of a few offending passages, these vigilantes overrule teachers and librarians. Since school boards change periodically, one year's literature may be another year's pornography.

The fact that a book is on the school shelves need not mean that all librarians or teachers join in agreement on its values. Under such a test, atheists might ban the Bible and self-appointed censors would remove controversial books that, with time, have become classics. "A library is a storehouse of knowledge," the court held—a sound definition of which school board meetings across the country might take note.

It was in 1867 that William Seward, then Secretary of State, persuaded a reluctant Congress to ratify the treatywith Russia which made Alaska a possession of the United States. The purchase price of $7,200,000 was considered exorbitant even though it figured about $12 per square mile, or less than 2 cents an acre. Upon discovery of the gold fields in the 1880's, "Seward's Folly" was acknowledged as a masterpiece of foresightedness. "Alaska Day," commemorating the purchase, is celebrated by the residents on October 18, and as 1967 marks the hundredth anniversary, special observances will be held next year.

BILL CALLED THREAT TO SHOPPER RIGHTS

The proposed Balanced Growth and Economic Planning Act would "totally disenfranchise" the consumer's right to buy what he wants and would kill the private enterprise system, the president of The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. warned recently.

Richard A. Riley said that the bill's stated intention—to achieve national economic planning—sounds good, "if you believe that the federal government is capable of making your business decisions for you—and we know that the federal government has rarely been able to manage any sizeable enterprise economically."

Eventually, he continued, the government would realize it couldn't meet its unrealistic goals and would begin allocating resources by product line with respect to labor intensity, energy consumption and other factors basic to the manufacturing process.

Nationalization of our critical industries would follow that, Mr. Riley said. This would deprive the consumer of his rights "to shop for price, for quality, for the kinds of goods he desires."

P.S. TO THE NEWS

THE BIG SPENDERS IN WASHINGTON
By VIRGIL PINKLEY
Copley News Service
(Substituting P.S. To The News)

Various races for Congress are heating up, and especially since President Ford has attacked the Democratic Congress as favoring big government and constantly increased expenditures.

Many Americans are beginning to realize that most of the taxes we pay are the result of congressional action. If Congress is economy-minded and it it is opposed to ever larger bureaucracies it would be difficult for the chief executive to increase taxes and pile up ever larger deficits.

More and more Americans are learning that if the right type of Congress were elected, many of our legislative and fiscal problems would be reduced.

All the members of the House of Representatives, where tax measures have to originate, are up for reelection. This means that if we want to we can really study their records and determine whether they are big spenders and giveaway artists, eager to increase bureaucracy and a speeding trend toward socialism.

Most Americans these days are turning down local or state bond issues, even for needed schools and other vital services. While they do this with their right hand, with their left hand they continue to elect congressmen who are extravagant, wasteful and little concerned with the individual taxpayers.

Too many congressmen for too long have voted for whatever they think will bring them reelection the next time the people go to the polls. As Disraeli put it so well: "Politicians think only of the next election while statesmen think of the next century."

We have people running for Congress who have proposed new legislation which would cost additionally anywhere from $100 billion to $200 billion if enacted. They say little or nothing about where the money will come from to provide all these new flossy programs, which they feel may bring them additional votes. If the legislation is then passed, the poor taxpayer in the end has to pick up the bill. Many congressmen argue that this has been going on now for more than 100 years and there is no reason why it can't continue indefinitely. They feel the public never will learn.

There will be a number of changes in the makeup of Congress regardless of who is elected.

Mike Mansfield will step down as the majority leader of the Senate since he is not seeking reelection.

Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania is retiring and will give up his position as Senate minority leader. Rep. Carl Albert, D-Oklahoma, Speaker of the House, is retiring. He was first elected to Congress in 1946.

Two of the most hotly contested Senate races are in New York and California. In the Empire State, Sen. James L. Buckley, a conservative Republican who first ran as an independent, is opposed by former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Daniel Patrick Moynihan, a Democrat.

In California Dr. S. I. Hayakawa is giving incumbent Democratic Sen. John Tunney a real race for his money.

People have begun to discover that Tunney is one of the all-time big spenders in Congress, that he constantly proposes legislation which would increase big government and bureaucracy and that he is pretty much a captive of the labor leaders.

Tunney starts off as an incumbent with heavy finanicial support and a strong Democratic registration in California of 2 to 1 over the GOP.

Many people like the calm, cool way of the former head of San Francisco State University and the manner in which he handled the student riots there. Hayakawa is a jaunty figure with his tam-o'-shanter and his pleasant smile. He says he is a Republican and a middle-of-the-road politician.

We would not be the least surprised to see Hayakawa defeat Tunney and their are many who are agreed that this would be a good thing for the state of California.

Maritime Labor Chiefs backed Carter after getting specific pledges – In Writing

WASHINGTON— Suddenly American journalists have discovered what this column has been reporting for some time now -- that maritime labor leaders are the practitioners of the nation's most sophisticated political power plays.

And they play it hard. They are tough pragmatists. They do their homework. They are super special lobbyists. And they never, but never, get political stardust in their eyes when it comes to delivering to their members. Meaning, getting them off the beach into well-paid seagoing jobs.

What catapulted Jesse Calhoon's 20,000-member Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn. (AFL-CIO) into the headlines this time was the crude effort of an FBI informer to "position" President Ford -- with now obviously fake information supposedly proving that the waterfront unions pieced off the President of the U.S.

That is -- bribed him. Well, Watergate prosecutor Charles Ruff is not a latter-day specialist in unionism. For a long time he headed the Justice Department's Criminal Divisoon's Management and Labor section. Now Chuck Ruff says Jerry Ford is clean.

No one is too big for the maritime labor chiefs to tackle. They tied the Canadian government into such hard knots back in the early '60s that the Dominion's prime minister was forced into an emergency conference with the late President Kennedy.

And I can recall a White House gathering when the late President Lyndon Johnson looked across the dining room at the labor leaders lunching with him and said that most people believe the President of the U.S. is the most powerful man in America.

But no, he added, pointing at the Seafarers' Paul Hall, the president of the 8-million member AFL-CIO Maritime Trades Department, "that man just beat me" in the Congress on the maritime bill.

Then, during the next administration, the maritime leaders backed Dick Nixon. He was their man because he played it big for them – in shipbuilding and cargo carrying. And all through the years there's always been affection for Jerry Ford. For them he was "right" on Maritime. And for them that's the name of the game.

Then President Ford vetoed the Energy Transportation Security Act of 1974. They had fought for this one for years. It called for far heavier trans-ocean freight and more jobs than in any era except wartime. They had counted on Congressman Ford. Later, Vice President Ford. But President Ford sits in a different chair. So he vetoed the bill. That cut him out.

They were rebuked. And in this business no labor chief can turn to his followers and ask them to back the rebuker for reelection. Truly sorrowful, they turned to Gov. Jimmy Carter. They offered. He bought. Heavy.

To this very minute Jerry Ford's and Paul Hall's voices light up when the other is mentioned. They're fond of each other. But they're professionals like Sunday afternoon footbll pros playing for bread. No personal hard feelings. And they wanted to keep it that way. So MEBA's Jesse Calhoon took the lead.

On May 11, the engineers' union president met privately with Mr. Carter for almost an hour in an ex-Congressman's Watergate apartment. They began "handling." The man from Plains said fine, he'd go along. He needed that labor support. It was still a long way to the national nominating convention.

At 9 p.m. May 25 in New York's Park Sheraton Hotel, suite 2124, they met again. Jesse Calhoon walked into an inner room as Mayor Abe Beame ambled out. For over an hour the candidate and the labor chief went point-by-point over a letter Gov. Carter was to send to Jesse Calhoon -- for public use.

The men from maritime labor were taking no chances. As one told me, "We nailed him down and in writing." So no one later can say there wasn't an understanding on the specifics of the agreement.

That three-page letter, dated May 25, was addressed, "Dear Jesse." It was signed "Jimmy Carter." That didn't go down so well. But all that mattered was the document in hand. This proved Mr. Carter was seapower-oriented and he would push for a big merchant marine. The labor chiefs had him pledged not only to bigger oil loads in American tankers but more international trade for U.S. freighters carrying ore, bauxite, wheat-- the whole thing.

On June 30 they met with him in a closed caucus in the Shoreham Americana here. Thus they all were -- and are -- political partners. Later that day the Democratic frontrunner was the guest of honor in the same hotel at a "Maritime Management-Labor Salute." Calhoon introduced the Georgian as the next Preisdent of the U.S.

These maritime leaders are realists. Their precincts are the holds, the decks, the engine rooms, the master and mates' quarters and the radio shacks of the American merchant fleet. That's where the Paul Halls and the Jesse Calhoons deliver. Their quid pro quo is made up of campaign money, manpower and the nation's most efficient vote machine.

They deliver. They expect delivery. But that's no reason for some hack informer to try to frame President Ford. That was a cheap shot.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Dole Linked to Milk Scandal

with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Evidence still buried in Watergate files reveals that Sen. Robert Dole, the GOP vice presidential candidate, pressured the Nixon White House on behalf of dairymen to accept $2 million in milk money. Dole was fully aware at the time that the dairymen were lobbying the White House for substantial milk subsidies and other favors that eventually cost the taxpayers millions.

The subsidies helped bring about President Nixon's resignation, led to ex-Treasury Secretary John Connally's trial and acquittal, and smeared both Democrats and Republicans with charges of accepting dirty money.

Dole's part in the scandal, however, has remained virtually unexplored. But now, we have unearthed two White House memos which show Dole twisted the arm of White House staff chief H.R. "Bob" Haldeman on behalf of the dairymen.

The crucial memo, stamped "Confidential" and dated Feb. 2, 1971, is from Haldeman to White House aide Chuck Colson. It tells how Dole tried to get the milk money flowing.

Haldeman confided in the memo that Dole, then the Republican national chairman, "sent me a note at the cabinet meeting (in early 1971) regarding the milk producers and apparently he is being pressured by them.

"They have told him that they are unable to work out a means of getting their activity going regarding their support for us. Would you please get in touch with Dole and follow up on this?"

The Dole note, according to one of those with knowledge of its contents, said, in effect, "Get off the stick. Why can't they (the milk producers) find anyone (at the White House) to deal with?"

In addition to penning the note, Dole "went back and forth ... on behalf of the milk producers" with White House aides, according to a White House official who was involved in the milk deal.

The Haldeman memo to Colson, however, got an unenthusiastic reception. Colson had already handled a $2 million offer from the milk producers for Nixon's reelection. The dairymen coupled their offer with a request for important favors.

Fearing that the offer smacked of bribery, Colson sent a memo to White House lawyer John Dean and talked with Haldeman about the milk deal.

In his Feb. 9, 1971, reply to Haldeman, Colson said, "The note which Bob Dole gave you at the cabinet meeting is the same problem I discussed with you in your office a few weeks ago.

"We don't have anyone who can handle support for us from outside interest groups like the milk producers ... I feel that it is terribly important that I not be personally involved (no one here should be)." We were told, however, that Dole kept up the pressure.

The scent of ready cash was too much for the White House. At a secret meeting headed by Nixon himself, the decision was made to reverse a ruling against the milk subsidies increase and grant it.

The White House tapes show that at that meeting, Dole's name came up twice. Former Agriculture Secretary Clifford Hardin, considering who should be brought into conversations on the milk matter, said, "We've got a little work to do. We've got to let ... Bob Dole ..."

Hardin was then interrupted, but later, White House aide John Ehrlichman suggested Dole be brought in to help harvest the political benefits from the milk price increase.

Nixon commented: "I think you have a good game plan."

After the meeting, the administration granted a hefty price increase to the milk industry. Nixon friends outside the White House set up committees through which the milk producers funneled hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Ironically, Dole himself received $15,600 from the milk producers in 1973. He returned all of it when the scandal broke. But at the time, reporters were searching for bigger fish to fry, and Dole's role in the 1971 events was all but overlooked.

We tried to talk with Dole, but he didn't return our calls. However, a spokesman said that Dole "wasn't involved in the milk price decisions," and made at most only a few appeals to the White House.

The spokesman quoted Dole as saying the milk producers "wanted to support the President and I passed the word along to the White House." Dole conceded he was aware that the dairy groups wanted price increases, "but that's what they always want." Dole said he couldn't remember sending a memo to the White House on the dairymen's behalf.

The milk scandal was explored during the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment hearings. However, a staff member told our associate, Marc Smolonsky, that Dole's role in the matter was not pursued because it didn't bear directly on the impeachment of Nixon.

Footnote: Dole's Democratic counterpart, Sen. Walter Mondale, D.-Minn., was also linked to the scandal. A milk lobbyist said a Mondale aide solicited him for $25,000 in 1971. Mondale denies knowledge of the solicitation, but concedes he got $5,000 from milk producers for a fund-raising dinner.

MORE MILITARY WARNINGS

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld gave forth the other day with a few more of the military facts of life which are causing so much anxiety to people who take the Soviet threat to his country seriously.

Meeting with reporters at the Pentagon, Rumsfeld brought them up to date on Soviet missile developments since his report to Congress last January.

Rumsfeld said the Soviets are pressing ahead with aggressive programs of unprecedented scope to develop both ICBMs and submarine- launched missiles. The development of multiple warhead missiles, according to Rumsfeld, has proceeded "at a little faster deployment rate than anticipated in January." Additionally, he said that the Soviet ICBM force now has deployed 100 of the huge SS-18 ICBMs, which can hurl a 15,000 pound warhead, with up to eight independently targeted warheads, between continents.

Even if a SALT II strategic arms limitation treaty is signed with the Soviets, according to Rumsfeld it will not prevent the Soviets from achieving more nuclear striking power than the U.S. This is because the Soviets could achieve an imbalance of power with the U.S. by combining weapons permitted within its limits and "gray area" weapons which are not included in the treaty's limitations.

Most significantly, Rumsfeld reported that the Soviets have a steady building program "which could carry them toward a capability in excess of that needed merely to deter nuclear war." Asked why, he replied that "they are clearly striving not to be on the losing side" in any nuclear war.

What the Secretary of Defense was saying, in other words, is that Russia is aiming for a first- strike capability which will allow her to fight and win a nuclear war against the United States.

So the warnings keep coming. Is the message getting through, America? If it doesn't, our present domestic debates may become only pages in history books, whose future chapters will be written by the new communist world rulers.

"It is beauty that begins to please, and tenderness that completes the charm."

These gadgets are expensive and must be paid for and will be paid for by speeding motorists inside the city limits. There will be a temptation to show a profitable income from the use of the equipment as has been done in other towns. Small towns can get a bad reputation from a too strict enforcement of speed laws with motorists avoiding such a town completely. We hope Shelbina will not get such a reputation from the use or abuse of the speed gun.

It was in 1867 that William Seward, then Secretary of State, persuaded a reluctant Congress to ratify the treatywith Russia which made Alaska a possession of the United States. The purchase price of $7,200,000 was considered exorbitant even though it figured about $12 per square mile, or less than 2 cents an acre. Upon discovery of the gold fields in the 1880's, "Seward's Folly" was acknowledged as a masterpiece of foresightedness. "Alaska Day," commemorating the purchase, is celebrated by the residents on October 18, and as 1967 marks the hundredth anniversary, special observances will be held next year.

A Magazine article addressed to parents has this to say: "A child may have a beautiful home, vacations at the shore, sacks full of toys, and everything that money can buy, but if his parents show in their own behaviour that they care little about education, scorn the life of the mind, and show no concern for high standards of conduct or performance in their own lives—then it is inaccurate to speak of the child as having had every advantage. It would be better to say that he had had almost every disadvantage."

BILL CALLED THREAT TO SHOPPER RIGHTS

The proposed Balanced Growth and Economic Planning Act would "totally disenfranchise" the consumer's right to buy what he wants and would kill the private enterprise system, the president of The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. warned recently.

Richard A. Riley said that the bill's stated intention—to achieve national economic planning—sounds good, "if you believe that the federal government is capable of making your business decisions for you—and we know that the federal government has rarely been able to manage any sizeable enterprise economically."

Eventually, he continued, the government would realize it couldn't meet its unrealistic goals and would begin allocating resources by product line with respect to labor intensity, energy consumption and other factors basic to the manufacturing process.

Nationalization of our critical industries would follow that, Mr. Riley said. This would deprive the consumer of his rights "to shop for price, for quality, for the kinds of goods he desires."

Tact is a priceless quality in good human relations. Whenever you find anyone who is outstandingly successful and popular, you will find a person who is outstandingly tactful. Tact is merely doing things in the way the other person would like them done, rather than in the way you yourself would do them if you had only yourself to please. Watch your tact and watch your influence over others rise.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

By VIRGIL PINKLEY
Copley News Service
(Substituting P.S. To The News)

Various races for Congress are heating up, and especially since President Ford has attacked the Democratic Congress as favoring big government and constantly increased expenditures.

Many Americans are beginning to realize that most of the taxes we pay are the result of congressional action. If Congress is economy-minded and it it is opposed to ever larger bureaucracies it would be difficult for the chief executive to increase taxes and pile up ever larger deficits.

More and more Americans are learning that if the right type of Congress were elected, many of our legislative and fiscal problems would be reduced.

All the members of the House of Representatives, where tax measures have to originate, are up for reelection. This means that if we want to we can really study their records and determine whether they are big spenders and giveaway artists, eager to increase bureaucracy and a speeding trend toward socialism.

Most Americans these days are turning down local or state bond issues, even for needed schools and other vital services. While they do this with their right hand, with their left hand they continue to elect congressmen who are extravagant, wasteful and little concerned with the individual taxpayers.

Too many congressmen for too long have voted for whatever they think will bring them reelection the next time the people go to the polls. As Disraeli put it so well: "Politicians think only of the next election while statesmen think of the next century."

We have people running for Congress who have proposed new legislation which would cost additionally anywhere from $100 billion to $200 billion if enacted. They say little or nothing about where the money will come from to provide all these new flossy programs, which they feel may bring them additional votes. If the legislation is then passed, the poor taxpayer in the end has to pick up the bill. Many congressmen argue that this has been going on now for more than 100 years and there is no reason why it can't continue indefinitely. They feel the public never will learn.

There will be a number of changes in the makeup of Congress regardless of who is elected.

Mike Mansfield will step down as the majority leader of the Senate since he is not seeking reelection.

Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania is retiring and will give up his position as Senate minority leader. Rep. Carl Albert, D-Oklahoma, Speaker of the House, is retiring. He was first elected to Congress in 1946.

Two of the most hotly contested Senate races are in New York and California. In the Empire State, Sen. James L. Buckley, a conservative Republican who first ran as an independent, is opposed by former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Daniel Patrick Moynihan, a Democrat.

In California Dr. S. I. Hayakawa is giving incumbent Democratic Sen. John Tunney a real race for his money.

People have begun to discover that Tunney is one of the all-time big spenders in Congress, that he constantly proposes legislation which would increase big government and bureaucracy and that he is pretty much a captive of the labor leaders.

Tunney starts off as an incumbent with heavy finanicial support and a strong Democratic registration in California of 2 to 1 over the GOP.

Many people like the calm, cool way of the former head of San Francisco State University and the manner in which he handled the student riots there. Hayakawa is a jaunty figure with his tam-o'-shanter and his pleasant smile. He says he is a Republican and a middle-of-the-road politician.

We would not be the least surprised to see Hayakawa defeat Tunney and their are many who are agreed that this would be a good thing for the state of California.

Inside Labor

Maritime Labor Chiefs backed Carter after getting specific pledges – In Writing

WASHINGTON— Suddenly American journalists have discovered what this column has been reporting for some time now -- that maritime labor leaders are the practitioners of the nation's most sophisticated political power plays.

And they play it hard. They are tough pragmatists. They do their homework. They are super special lobbyists. And they never, but never, get political stardust in their eyes when it comes to delivering to their members. Meaning, getting them off the beach into well-paid seagoing jobs.

What catapulted Jesse Calhoon's 20,000-member Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn. (AFL-CIO) into the headlines this time was the crude effort of an FBI informer to "position" President Ford -- with now obviously fake information supposedly proving that the waterfront unions pieced off the President of the U.S.

That is -- bribed him. Well, Watergate prosecutor Charles Ruff is not a latter-day specialist in unionism. For a long time he headed the Justice Department's Criminal Divisoon's Management and Labor section. Now Chuck Ruff says Jerry Ford is clean.

No one is too big for the maritime labor chiefs to tackle. They tied the Canadian government into such hard knots back in the early '60s that the Dominion's prime minister was forced into an emergency conference with the late President Kennedy.

And I can recall a White House gathering when the late President Lyndon Johnson looked across the dining room at the labor leaders lunching with him and said that most people believe the President of the U.S. is the most powerful man in America.

But no, he added, pointing at the Seafarers' Paul Hall, the president of the 8-million member AFL-CIO Maritime Trades Department, "that man just beat me" in the Congress on the maritime bill.

Then, during the next administration, the maritime leaders backed Dick Nixon. He was their man because he played it big for them – in shipbuilding and cargo carrying. And all through the years there's always been affection for Jerry Ford. For them he was "right" on Maritime. And for them that's the name of the game.

Then President Ford vetoed the Energy Transportation Security Act of 1974. They had fought for this one for years. It called for far heavier trans-ocean freight and more jobs than in any era except wartime. They had counted on Congressman Ford. Later, Vice President Ford. But President Ford sits in a different chair. So he vetoed the bill. That cut him out.

They were rebuked. And in this business no labor chief can turn to his followers and ask them to back the rebuker for reelection. Truly sorrowful, they turned to Gov. Jimmy Carter. They offered. He bought. Heavy.

To this very minute Jerry Ford's and Paul Hall's voices light up when the other is mentioned. They're fond of each other. But they're professionals like Sunday afternoon footbll pros playing for bread. No personal hard feelings. And they wanted to keep it that way. So MEBA's Jesse Calhoon took the lead.

On May 11, the engineers' union president met privately with Mr. Carter for almost an hour in an ex-Congressman's Watergate apartment. They began "handling." The man from Plains said fine, he'd go along. He needed that labor support. It was still a long way to the national nominating convention.

At 9 p.m. May 25 in New York's Park Sheraton Hotel, suite 2124, they met again. Jesse Calhoon walked into an inner room as Mayor Abe Beame ambled out. For over an hour the candidate and the labor chief went point-by-point over a letter Gov. Carter was to send to Jesse Calhoon -- for public use.

The men from maritime labor were taking no chances. As one told me, "We nailed him down and in writing." So no one later can say there wasn't an understanding on the specifics of the agreement.

That three-page letter, dated May 25, was addressed, "Dear Jesse." It was signed "Jimmy Carter." That didn't go down so well. But all that mattered was the document in hand. This proved Mr. Carter was seapower-oriented and he would push for a big merchant marine. The labor chiefs had him pledged not only to bigger oil loads in American tankers but more international trade for U.S. freighters carrying ore, bauxite, wheat-- the whole thing.

On June 30 they met with him in a closed caucus in the Shoreham Americana here. Thus they all were -- and are -- political partners. Later that day the Democratic frontrunner was the guest of honor in the same hotel at a "Maritime Management-Labor Salute." Calhoon introduced the Georgian as the next Preisdent of the U.S.

These maritime leaders are realists. Their precincts are the holds, the decks, the engine rooms, the master and mates' quarters and the radio shacks of the American merchant fleet. That's where the Paul Halls and the Jesse Calhoons deliver. Their quid pro quo is made up of campaign money, manpower and the nation's most efficient vote machine.

They deliver. They expect delivery. But that's no reason for some hack informer to try to frame President Ford. That was a cheap shot.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Evidence still buried in Watergate files reveals that Sen. Robert Dole, the GOP vice presidential candidate, pressured the Nixon White House on behalf of dairymen to accept $2 million in milk money. Dole was fully aware at the time that the dairymen were lobbying the White House for substantial milk subsidies and other favors that eventually cost the taxpayers millions.

The subsidies helped bring about President Nixon's resignation, led to ex-Treasury Secretary John Connally's trial and acquittal, and smeared both Democrats and Republicans with charges of accepting dirty money.

Dole's part in the scandal, however, has remained virtually unexplored. But now, we have unearthed two White House memos which show Dole twisted the arm of White House staff chief H.R. "Bob" Haldeman on behalf of the dairymen.

The crucial memo, stamped "Confidential" and dated Feb. 2, 1971, is from Haldeman to White House aide Chuck Colson. It tells how Dole tried to get the milk money flowing.

Haldeman confided in the memo that Dole, then the Republican national chairman, "sent me a note at the cabinet meeting (in early 1971) regarding the milk producers and apparently he is being pressured by them.

"They have told him that they are unable to work out a means of getting their activity going regarding their support for us. Would you please get in touch with Dole and follow up on this?"

The Dole note, according to one of those with knowledge of its contents, said, in effect, "Get off the stick. Why can't they (the milk producers) find anyone (at the White House) to deal with?"

In addition to penning the note, Dole "went back and forth ... on behalf of the milk producers" with White House aides, according to a White House official who was involved in the milk deal.

The Haldeman memo to Colson, however, got an unenthusiastic reception. Colson had already handled a $2 million offer from the milk producers for Nixon's reelection. The dairymen coupled their offer with a request for important favors.

Fearing that the offer smacked of bribery, Colson sent a memo to White House lawyer John Dean and talked with Haldeman about the milk deal.

In his Feb. 9, 1971, reply to Haldeman, Colson said, "The note which Bob Dole gave you at the cabinet meeting is the same problem I discussed with you in your office a few weeks ago.

"We don't have anyone who can handle support for us from outside interest groups like the milk producers ... I feel that it is terribly important that I not be personally involved (no one here should be)." We were told, however, that Dole kept up the pressure.

The scent of ready cash was too much for the White House. At a secret meeting headed by Nixon himself, the decision was made to reverse a ruling against the milk subsidies increase and grant it.

The White House tapes show that at that meeting, Dole's name came up twice. Former Agriculture Secretary Clifford Hardin, considering who should be brought into conversations on the milk matter, said, "We've got a little work to do. We've got to let ... Bob Dole ..."

Hardin was then interrupted, but later, White House aide John Ehrlichman suggested Dole be brought in to help harvest the political benefits from the milk price increase.

Nixon commented: "I think you have a good game plan."

After the meeting, the administration granted a hefty price increase to the milk industry. Nixon friends outside the White House set up committees through which the milk producers funneled hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Ironically, Dole himself received $15,600 from the milk producers in 1973. He returned all of it when the scandal broke. But at the time, reporters were searching for bigger fish to fry, and Dole's role in the 1971 events was all but overlooked.

We tried to talk with Dole, but he didn't return our calls. However, a spokesman said that Dole "wasn't involved in the milk price decisions," and made at most only a few appeals to the White House.

The spokesman quoted Dole as saying the milk producers "wanted to support the President and I passed the word along to the White House." Dole conceded he was aware that the dairy groups wanted price increases, "but that's what they always want." Dole said he couldn't remember sending a memo to the White House on the dairymen's behalf.

The milk scandal was explored during the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment hearings. However, a staff member told our associate, Marc Smolonsky, that Dole's role in the matter was not pursued because it didn't bear directly on the impeachment of Nixon.

Footnote: Dole's Democratic counterpart, Sen. Walter Mondale, D.-Minn., was also linked to the scandal. A milk lobbyist said a Mondale aide solicited him for $25,000 in 1971. Mondale denies knowledge of the solicitation, but concedes he got $5,000 from milk producers for a fund-raising dinner.

'Boy Scouting is on the rise'

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Boy Scouting is on the rise in Southeast Missouri. That is the conclusion of Southeast Missouri Council Boy Scout Executive Jerry Beckner, based on response to the council's annual fall roundup.

With Spirit of '76 as its theme, the first six weeks of the fall roundup has produced 568 new boys for the scouting program.

"This is definitely one of the best roundups we have had in years," declared Beckner. "Over the last four years the council has decreased in the number of boys because there were fewer available and fewer leaders than we needed, which resulted in less troops to join."

Beckner said he sees this roundup success as an indication that scouting is on the upswing in Southeast Missouri, and he expects the increased participation to continue.

Beckner said a number of reasons account for the increase. However, he feels the most important factor is "awareness on the part of parents that scouting is a worthwhile program."

The roundup started with a series of school night programs where boys interested in joining Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts or Explorers could come to their school some evening and receive more information.

The recruiting drive will continue through the end of the year.

Dr. Bill Stacy of Cape Girardeau, who served as council chairman of the fall roundup, attributed a lot of the success to the many volunteers around the council who worked on the program.

Stacy explained that this year the council took a different approach to its fall roundup. Rather than have one big event to attract boys, Stacy said the council has tried to use the school nights as the main tool. "Recruiting is more of a continuing process and goes on all the time," Stacy said.

He pointed out that no recruiting quotas were used this time and said it was just a matter of making scouting available to the boys and giving them a chance to participate in the program.

The biggest increase came in Cub Scouting, which is for boys who have either completed the second grade or who are ages 8, 9 or 10.

A total of 279 new Cubs signed up, with the most coming in the Sioux District, which is based in the Malden-Dexter area where 106 boys joined packs.

The Osage District, based in Poplar Bluff, had 98 new Cubs; the Okeechobee District, headquartered in Sikeston, had 81 Cub Scout recruits; and the Seminole District, in the Kennett-Caruthersville area, had 80 new Cubs.

The Shawnee District, which is the largest of the five and based in Cape Girardeau, had the fewest new Cub Scouts with 24. However, the district had 76 of the 163 new Boy Scouts who have joined this fall.

Boys between 11 and 18 or who have finished the fifth grade can join Boy Scouts.

The Seminole District had 48 new Boy Scout recruits, Okeechobee had 34, the Sioux five and the Osage had none reported for the first six weeks.

Explorers, a program for scouts 14 and over, had 16 new recruits, including 11 in the Seminole, four in the Okeechobee and one in the Osage districts.

Approximately 4,100 boys are involved in the scouting program of the Southeast Missouri Council as members of 180 units.

Approximate totals of scouts in each district are: Shawnee, 1,203; Okeechobee, 826; Seminole, 719; Sioux, 717; and Osage, 709.

Chairmen in each of the districts for the fall roundup were: Bill Port, Cape Girardeau, Shawnee; Bill Fischer, Dexter, Sioux; Ernest Elledge, Sikeston, Okeechobee; Danny Thomas, Steele, Seminole; and Neil Stein, Poplar Bluff, Osage.

Style-a-thon plans are set for St. Jude Childrens Hospital

MALDEN — Plans for a style-a-thon to be held in the Southeast Missouri area on Oct 30 with all proceeds to go to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital have been announced by Norma Cecil, Bootheel coordinator for the hospital.

Located in Memphis, Tenn., St. Jude Hospital was founded by entertainer Danny Thomas in 1962, and is the largest childhood cancer research center in the world, in terms of numbers of patients and treatment successes.

St. Jude is a totally free institution to all patients accepted, and the only way the door can remain open is through charitable donations.

Mrs. Cecil encourages all beauty salon and barber shop owners to sign up for the style-a-thon if they haven't already done so. Contact Mrs. Cecil at her Malden office at telephone number 276-3116 or by writing her at P.O. Box 96, Malden, Mo. 63863.

The public is encouraged to look for the participating shops and salons in the area and make an appointment in advance, then make a donation to the hospital through the shop and salon owners.

LITITZ, Pa. (AP) — Each year since 1843 America's only candle festival has been held in this small Pennsylvania Dutch community.

The event features more than 5,000 candles, placed on wood lattices over a stream in Lititz Springs Park. A Queen of Candles starts the ceremony, then Boy Scouts with torches light the huge display of tapers that extends for a quarter-mile. As a Bicentennial gesture, Hallmark Cards donated the candles for this year's 134th annual celebration.

Copeland to aid group in classifying nursing homes

JEFFERSON CITY — Members of the State Board of Health Task Force to Consider Classifying Nursing Homes will meet here Friday.

Serving on this task force for the Missouri House of Representatives is Fred E. "Gene" Copeland, D-New Madrid, who is also chairman of a House Appropriation Committee subcommittee on nursing homes.

"I was glad to have the opportunity to serve on this task force as the needs and problems of patients in nursing homes has been brought to my attention through the Appropriations Committee," Copeland stated concerning his appointment to the task force. "I had never had any idea some of the problems mentioned in testimony and correspondence of the committee existed.

"I am only hopeful we will come up with valuable conclusions and reclassifications which will ultimately make the lives of the patients a better lot. The patients come first and foremost to me," he added.

Harry Panhorst of St. Charles is chairman of the task force.

Parma schools plan open house

PARMA — The Parma Unit of New Madrid County R-1 Enlarged School District will have an open house Monday, which will be held in conjunction with the observance of Veterans' Day.

A formal program will begin the activities at 7 p.m. in the Parma High School gymnasium.

Parents of students in the Parma Unit are encouraged to attend the program and afterwards visit their child's teachers.

Stroke club will meet Thursday

CAPE GIRARDEAU— The Southeast Missouri Stroke Club will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Cape Girardeau Vocational School, 300 N. Clark.

The guest speaker will be Dr. Jerry Kinder, who will talk to the club about the heart.

The club is a re-educational and social organization for men and women devoted to the welfare and interest of stroke, head injury and aphasia victims and their families. Any member of a victim's family or a concerned friend may join as an associate member.

For further information, contact the local Heart Association office, Harris Building, P.O. Box 21, Cape Girardeau, Mo., 63701, or phone 335-3240.

The club is sponsored by the Cape Girardeau division as a community service program.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

News Editor
Sikeston Standard
205 S. New Madrid
Sikeston, Mo. 63801

Dear Sir,

Wouldn't it be nice if Jimmy Carter stopped changing his mind, and stood on a position long enough for us to find him.

One thing he should change his mind about is taxing the church. One of the greatest sources of charity, in our country's long history of Christian charity, has been our churches.

The church has always been a great source of comfort and help, not only to those who are sick and poor, but also those who have not known a living faith.

Mr. Carter's plan to tax churches will withdraw the support for our missionary work and our money to help all kinds of unfortunate people. This time, he should change his postion.

Respectfully
Ann Boldizar Fagin

Park Named For General's Kin

SUN PRAIRIE, Wis. (AP) — As part of the bicentennial celebration, a new park here has been named for Tabitha Burgoyne Bird, daughter of a nephew of "Gentleman Johnny" Burgoyne, British general defeated at Saratoga in the Revolution.

One of her great-great-granddaughters, Caroline Bird, New York author, spoke at the dedication ceremonies.

The nephew, Dr. Augustus Horatio Burgoyne, a medical officer with the invading British, was captured at the Battle of Bennington in 1777 and married Annie Rice, one of the local women who fed the prisoners there.

Tabitha, one of their four daughters, married Zenas Bird of Connecticut and after his death moved with several of her sons from Munnsville, N.Y., to Wisconsin.

They founded and named this community and Tabitha is buried here. Some of her sons also helped found Madison and one was the contractor on construction of the first territorial capitol. Eleven of her 12 children lived to adulthood.

Kitchen Sponge Enters Surgery

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The housewife's common plastic sponge is getting to be as useful in medicine as it is in the kitchen.

To form these sponges, polyvinyl alcohol is converted into a sponge-like substance by foaming agents and then hardened with formaldehyde. The material is inert, compressible by 10-15 to 1 when wet and has a plastic memory so it can resume its original shape when not under pressure. It is compatible with human tissues and the body won't reject it.

The latest application in medicine was devised by three radiologists at the University of Minnesota Hospitals here. Tiny amounts of the sponge are placed on the tip of a catheter and, under x-ray control, inserted in a blood vessel to halt bleeding or to rob a tumor of its blood supply.

Physicians have also used the plastic sponge material as a skin substitute in burn patients, as a nonsurgical closure of a heart channel in newborn babies and as a synthetic material in the early days of heart surgery.

Senior citizens are touring Tom Sauk Mountain

SCOTT CITY — A group of 46 senior citizens left this morning for a one-day trip to Tom Sauk Mountain, Johnston Shut-Ins, and other areas. The trip was coordinated by Mrs. Mary Bain, coordinator of the Scott City Delta Area Economic Opportunity Center office.

On Nov. 27 the group plans to go to Bernie to see the Plummer Family Show from Branson.

Last Thursday, 134 senior citizens of north Scott County were entertained at a luncheon by the Chaffee Senior Citizens at the Veterans of Foreign Wars hall in Chaffee.

Speakers at the luncheon were Mrs. Mary Bain, Edgar Berg of Caruthersville, an attorney representing the Bootheel Area Legal Assistance program (BALAP), and Mrs. Dorothy Behrens of the Area Agency on Aging in Cape Girardeau, who spoke on her agency's programs.

Mrs. Bain discussed various programs for senior citizens under the Title 20 program. Some of the programs to be available to senior citizens, she said, are transportation for medical care and homemaker-chore programs. Persons for these programs must be certified and information may be obtained at Scott City DAEOC office, she said.

Berg spoke to the group of legal services which will be available through his office for persons 60 years old or older. He stated dates will be scheduled in different areas in the near future when he or a para-legal will advise senior citizens on legal matters.

Mrs. Emma Beinert of Chaffee won the award for being the oldest senior citizen present and Mrs. Anna Glastetter of Kelso won the award for having the most grandchildren, a total of 60, and an additional 12 great grandchildren.

The next meeting of the north Scott County senior citizen group is scheduled to be held in Kelso in March, 1977.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

News Editor
Sikeston Standard
205 S. New Madrid
Sikeston, Mo. 63801

Dear Sir,

Wouldn't it be nice if Jimmy Carter stopped changing his mind, and stood on a position long enough for us to find him.

One thing he should change his mind about is taxing the church. One of the greatest sources of charity, in our country's long history of Christian charity, has been our churches.

The church has always been a great source of comfort and help, not only to those who are sick and poor, but also those who have not known a living faith.

Mr. Carter's plan to tax churches will withdraw the support for our missionary work and our money to help all kinds of unfortunate people. This time, he should change his postion.

Respectfully
Ann Boldizar Fagin

Park Named For General's Kin

SUN PRAIRIE, Wis. (AP) — As part of the bicentennial celebration, a new park here has been named for Tabitha Burgoyne Bird, daughter of a nephew of "Gentleman Johnny" Burgoyne, British general defeated at Saratoga in the Revolution.

One of her great-great-granddaughters, Caroline Bird, New York author, spoke at the dedication ceremonies.

The nephew, Dr. Augustus Horatio Burgoyne, a medical officer with the invading British, was captured at the Battle of Bennington in 1777 and married Annie Rice, one of the local women who fed the prisoners there.

Tabitha, one of their four daughters, married Zenas Bird of Connecticut and after his death moved with several of her sons from Munnsville, N.Y., to Wisconsin.

They founded and named this community and Tabitha is buried here. Some of her sons also helped found Madison and one was the contractor on construction of the first territorial capitol. Eleven of her 12 children lived to adulthood.

Kitchen Sponge Enters Surgery

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The housewife's common plastic sponge is getting to be as useful in medicine as it is in the kitchen.

To form these sponges, polyvinyl alcohol is converted into a sponge-like substance by foaming agents and then hardened with formaldehyde. The material is inert, compressible by 10-15 to 1 when wet and has a plastic memory so it can resume its original shape when not under pressure. It is compatible with human tissues and the body won't reject it.

The latest application in medicine was devised by three radiologists at the University of Minnesota Hospitals here. Tiny amounts of the sponge are placed on the tip of a catheter and, under x-ray control, inserted in a blood vessel to halt bleeding or to rob a tumor of its blood supply.

Physicians have also used the plastic sponge material as a skin substitute in burn patients, as a nonsurgical closure of a heart channel in newborn babies and as a synthetic material in the early days of heart surgery.

Senior citizens are touring Tom Sauk Mountain

SCOTT CITY — A group of 46 senior citizens left this morning for a one-day trip to Tom Sauk Mountain, Johnston Shut-Ins, and other areas. The trip was coordinated by Mrs. Mary Bain, coordinator of the Scott City Delta Area Economic Opportunity Center office.

On Nov. 27 the group plans to go to Bernie to see the Plummer Family Show from Branson.

Last Thursday, 134 senior citizens of north Scott County were entertained at a luncheon by the Chaffee Senior Citizens at the Veterans of Foreign Wars hall in Chaffee.

Speakers at the luncheon were Mrs. Mary Bain, Edgar Berg of Caruthersville, an attorney representing the Bootheel Area Legal Assistance program (BALAP), and Mrs. Dorothy Behrens of the Area Agency on Aging in Cape Girardeau, who spoke on her agency's programs.

Mrs. Bain discussed various programs for senior citizens under the Title 20 program. Some of the programs to be available to senior citizens, she said, are transportation for medical care and homemaker-chore programs. Persons for these programs must be certified and information may be obtained at Scott City DAEOC office, she said.

Berg spoke to the group of legal services which will be available through his office for persons 60 years old or older. He stated dates will be scheduled in different areas in the near future when he or a para-legal will advise senior citizens on legal matters.

Mrs. Emma Beinert of Chaffee won the award for being the oldest senior citizen present and Mrs. Anna Glastetter of Kelso won the award for having the most grandchildren, a total of 60, and an additional 12 great grandchildren.

The next meeting of the north Scott County senior citizen group is scheduled to be held in Kelso in March, 1977.

Signs proclamation

Missouri Gov. Christopher S. Bond signed a proclamation recently making this week, Oct. 17-23, National Business Women's Week in Missouri. Shown at the signing in the governor's office in Jefferson City are, from left, Cathalene McNeil of Brookfield, chairman of National Business Women's Week; Corenne McMurray of Rutledge, state president; Flossie Burkhart of Macon, editor of Missouri Business Woman, and Grayce Alexander of Portageville, public relations chairman. The Sikeston Business and Professional Women's Club had a tea at the home of Mrs. Jeannie Williams, 201 Nancy Drive, Sunday to join the salute to business and professional women. Attending from Sikeston were Sondra Armour, Dorothy Clayton, Pamela Harmon, Addie Mae Jones, Bonnie Strickland, Violetta McGee, Electa O'Hara, Carol Presley, Edna Shankle, Mary Sidwell, Viola Statler and Marilyn Lambert.

Woman's Day attracts 58

Security Federal Savings and Loan Association of Sikeston was the scene for the University of Missouri Extension "Woman's Day, '76" held Oct. 5. Fifty-eight women were in attendance representing 12 Extension clubs from Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, and Pemiscot Counties. Mistress of ceremonies was Scott County Extension Association President Margie Scheeter. The program was planned by a committee of women from the Missouri Extension Homemakers Association of Scott County.

A program on crafts was presented by Mrs. Dave Hale of Cape Girardeau. Some o the crafts demonstrated were hedge apple flowers, papier tole, and country carving.

A program on swine flu was presented by Warren Manning, director of the Scott County Health Department. Manning stressed the importance of persons 65 years of age and older as well as the chronically ill having the swine flu immunization. He sated that at this time immunization is not recommended for children between five- 17 years of age. Persons having any questions concerning the immunization should contact their family doctor or call the health department in Benton or Sikeston.

During the lunch break, the women enjoyed a preview of the new fall and winer fashions presented by a local boutique. Fashion narrator was Sue Brockmeyer of Scott City. Models were Carol Dirnberger and Margie Scheeter of Oran, Pat Moore and Corona Essner of New Hamburg, and Virginia Nickels of Sikeston.

"Precepts of Retirement" was the program presented by Edith Lusk, child and family development specialist, headquartered in Perryville. She stated that satisfactory retirement can be assured in advance when:

We buttress our finances with added insurance, savings, and investments;

Good preventive health measures are followed;

Social contacts are strengthened with new contacts and friends;

Comfortable living conditions are planned for; and

We are open to new and varied educational interests we can do in later life.

In closing, Mrs. Lusk read the following quotation, "In the intellectual and spiritual sphere of our live lies the secret of the coming age of leisure and retirement."

The final presentation of the day was presented by Mario Arisdizabal, an exchange student from Colombia, South America.

Gentlemen prefer dresses but experts say pants safer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Skirts and dresses may be more ladylike but pants are safer, say two Johns Hopkins University researchers who credit the switch to pants for a dramatic decline in burn deaths among girls.

From 1950 to 1974, the number of girls who died as a result of clothing fires declined 55 per cent, the researchers said, with the greatest decrease noted since the late 1960s.

Burn deaths among boys decreased 12 per cent in the 25 years, they added.

The period roughly paralleled the rise in popularity of pants and slacks among women and girls, said G. Stewart Young and Susan P. Baker of Johns Hopkins' School of Public Health.

The nationwide figures they cited Tuesday in a report prepared for the annual meeting of the American Public Health Association in Miami Beach were for boys and girls under 10 years of age.

"The timing of the style change is of interest, since it preceded by several years the marked decrease in female burn deaths related to clothing," the researcher said.

Until the mid-1960s, they said, girls under 10 had deaths rates that were much higher than for boys, a situation unlike that for any other area of injury-related deaths.

The higher rate of burn deaths among girls, their report noted, could be attributed to loose-fitting, easily ignited dresses and nightgowns.

But as pants supplanted skirts and dresses in the female wardrobe, the ratio reversed. By the mid-1960s boys had the higher burn-death rate, they said.

In an effort to find just how quickly pants for women have come into vogue, the researchers checked mail-order catalogs from 1950 through 1971.

They found one major retailer increased the type of pants shown in girls' sizes from four to 49, while the number of dresses increased by just two, from 25 to 27. Other catalogs showed similar trends, they said.

Young and Mrs. Baker also cited advances in medical treatment for burns as a possible reason for the lowered death rates, but noted that the better treatment could be assumed to have been applied equally to boys and girls.

Abused child's death prompts change in social service policy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Social workers in Tennessee have been ordered to stop returning abused children to their families. And abused children already returned to their parents on a trial basis will be sent back to foster homes or institutions.

The dual order, issued Tuesday by state Human Services Commissioner Horace Bass, follows the death last week of 4-year-old Melisha Morgana Gibson at Cleveland, Tenn.

The girl's parents, charged with murdering her, had served six-month jail terms for abusing her when she was 11 months old. But human services workers and a juvenile judge returned her to the couple on a trial basis last May.

Melisha's stepfather, Ronald Maddux, and mother, Wanda Gibson Maddux, were ordered held without bond Tuesday pending grand jury action in the case. Both pleaded innocent through court-appointed attorneys.

Last week, following the child's death, Bass said his department's philosophy was to maintain the family unit. He said welfare departments believed that a child is better off in his or her own home, if the parents can be helped.

But Tuesday Bass ordered the department's social and legal staffs "to resist any efforts by the courts to return once-abused children to their parents and to initiate no such returns."

Bass also ordered a re-evaluation of the entire state child abuse program, according to his administrative assistant, Warren Causey,

A police report entered at Tuesday's hearing for Melisha's parents said she was forced to walk around the house for a full day by her stepfather. He allegedly said he beat her repeatedly with a stick and put her to bed naked and wet on the cold night before she died.

Conservation agent is meeting speaker

Arthur Barnard, conservation agent, presented a color film, "Design for Conservation" at the Oct. 12th meeting of the Woman's Club of Sikeston at the Heritage House. A question and answer period followed.

Mrs. W. Z. Baker, second vice president, reported that the General Federation of Women's Clubs seeks to add Hawaii as a new state federation and that the September 1977 board meeting of the General Federation will be held in Hawaii.

Mrs. M. E. Montgomery described the Exchange Club meeting held in Dexter with members of the Monday Club there. Those attending this meeting on Oct. 11 were president Lois Goodpasture, Mrs. M. E. Montgomery, Mrs. Otto Hahs, Mrs. E. J. Nienstedt, Mrs. W. G. Funk, Mrs. Fred Koch, Mrs. W. Z. Baker and Mrs. Clint Scott.

A book review presented by Mrs. Mildred Hatch dealt with the interesting aspects of life during the Revolutionary period.

Mrs. Fred Koch, coordinator of the Junior Woman's Club, reported on a joint session with the Juniors and the Woman's Club Seniors, when Mrs. Christopher Bond presented the program. Those attending were Mrs. W. W. Goodpasture, Mrs. W. Z. Baker, Mrs Fred Koch and Mrs. Fred Steward, Sr.

A new member admitted into the Woman's Club membership was Mrs. Van Strickland of Sikeston, who has been active in Federated Club work for many years.

Woman heads arthritis drive

ST. LOUIS — Mrs. Lloyd (Shirley) Young of Scott City, has been named Scott City Community Chairman of The Arthritis Foundation's 1976 campaign. The announcement was made by Bernard A. Ross, president of the Eastern Missouri Chapter of the national non-profit voluntary health association.

The theme for the fund-raising campaign to be conducted during October is "Spirit of '76 Revolution Against Arthritis." The campaign will include the annual door-to-door Victory March for Arthritis, as well as a Business Gifts drive and other special events.

More than 3300 people in Scott City have arthritis, according to Ross, who said, "The time is now to wage a war against America's No. 1 crippling disease."

Funds raised this year will support the Arthritis Founation's continuing program in public and professional education, patient care in eight eastern Missouri clinics, and research locally in three medical institutions as well as through the national program.

Anyone wishing to help with The Arthritis Foundation campaign in Scott City may telephone Mrs. Lloyd (Shirley) Young at 264-2333.

Mrs. Bock back from conference

NEW MADRID — Mrs. Harry Bock, a leader of the STOP ERA movement, attended the Fifth Annual National STOP ERA Leadership Conference held Oct. 8-10 at the Marriott Hotel in St. Louis.

More than 200 women leaders from 40 states participated in the conference.

"The theme of the conference," explained Mrs. Bock, "was a victory celebration. Not a single state ratified the Equal Rights Amendment during our Bicentennial year."

National STOP ERA Chairman Phyllis Schlafly delivered the keynote speech at the conference entitled, "understanding the Difference." She was joined on the program by Princess Pale Moon, the Cherokee Indian soprano who sang this year for the opening of the Summer Olympic Games in Montreal and at the Republican National Convention.

Congressman Henry Hyde of Illinois addressed the group under the title, "Let Your Voice Be Heard."

Many factors affect heart disease risk

Questions from readers about food and diet are welcomed. Letters should be addressed to: Dr. James W. Nordstrom, Cooperative Extension, Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Q. Which is more important as a cause of heart disease, improper diet or stresses of life (i.e., hard work, emotional problems)?

A. A number of things have been found to be linked with a higher risk of heart disease, including high blood pressure, excessive cigarette smoking (more than one pack a day), high levels of blood lipids (cholesterol and triglucerides), diabetes, lack of exercise, obesity, emotional stress and a family history of heart disease. A combination of these conditions in a person tends to increase the risk of developing premature heart disease.

Our traditional ideas associating stress and more health problems with people in supervisory jobs appear questionable in light of studies conducted on employes of large corporations and from data of the National Health Survey. These findings showed that blue collar workers were more likely to develop heart disease than managers and executives. Even blue collar workers who advanced to managerial positions had better overall health records than their former work associates who remained at the same level of employment.

A college education was also beneficial, since corporation employes who had attended college were found to have less heart disease and better general health than employes who had no college training. A look at behavior patterns indicates several things that help explain the better health of the college graduates. Their diets tended to be lower in cholesterol, they exercised more and had fewer family and work-related problems, on the average, than the no-college men. In addition, the college grads had lower blood pressure, smoked less and started smoking later in life and were taller and slimmer.

Although it is generally conceded that emotional stress has something to do with heart disease and health in general, the fact that emotional factors are hard to measure makes it difficult to establish correlations. It is therefore understandable that things that are more easily measured should receive more attention.

Thus, the three primary factors that have been shown to be linked to risk for heart disease are high blood pressure, excessive cigarette smoking and elevated blood cholesterol. When all three occur at the same time in one person the likelihood for heart disease is much greater than when only one of the problems exist.

Papaya Please, don't squeeze

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Don't squeeze the papaya. It bruises easily. Judge how ripe it is with your eye rather than with your fingers. Once you're a papaya-fancier, you'll find this rather easy to do.

As the noted botanist and cookbook writer, Alex D. Hawkes, says: "In supermarkets, the fruits are usually offered when only semiripe; they mature in a warm, shaded spot in the kitchen with some rapidity." When the skin color ranges from half yellow-green to all yellow-orange the papaya is fully ripe and may be refrigerated for about a week. If the papaya is all green when it comes into the kitchen, the ripening may take from three to five days.

Because lately papayas seem to be more abundant than heretofore, we've been looking into their background. And we blush to think that we didn't even know how they grow! Here Dr. Hawkes is a ready help. He writes that the papaya (Carica papaya) "is native to tropical America . . . and is one of the tropics' most extraordinary plants. It is not a tree — despite its appearance and its growth to ten feet or even more in height — but rather, a woody herbaceous plant, one of the most rapid-growing species known when maintained under optimum cultural conditions of rich, moist soil and constantly warm temperatures."

But recently we tried a Papaya Topping of which we are quite enamored. It's a heavenly combination of ripe papaya blended with banana, pineapple and lemon juice. We liked it so much over cut-up fresh fruit that we served it in very small portions to our taste-testers. Then we smuggled the rest of it into the refrigerator so that from time to time in the next couple of days we could gobble it up ourselves!

PAPAYA TOPPING

1 ripe papaya (about 1 pound), halved and seeded

1 ripe banana, sliced

1 can (8 ounces) crushed pineapple in its own juice

3 tablespoons lemon juice

With a spoon, scoop out the papaya pulp into an electric blender. Add banana, pineapple and lemon juice. Whirl just until pureed. Cover tightly and refrigerate; holds up well, keeping its flavor and color for several days. Makes about 2½ cups. Delicious served over sliced bananas and orange sections or a mixture of diced papaya and other fresh fruits.

Weddings to come

Myers-Dugan

CHARLESTON — Patricia Myers of Charleston and Robert J. Dugan Jr. of Wyatt will be wed at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 5 at the United Methodist Church of Wyatt.

Miss Myers lived with Mrs. Art L. Wallhausen Sr. the past year while attending Charleston High School. She graduated from high school in May.

Dugan, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Dugan Sr. of Wyatt, is also a 1976 graduate of Charleston High School and farms with his father.

No wedding invitations will be sent. All relatives and friends of the couple are invited to attend.

An efficient way to store sandwiches individually in small plastic bags: slide the sandwich into a corner of the bag and press lightly to exclude air. If the bag has an open end fold it over for a tight fit, then fold remaining edge over sandwich and store with the folded surface down. If the bag has a flap, manipulate it to seal the sandwich tightly.

Ann Landers

Prospective patients turn tables on psychiatrists

Dear Ann Landers: I'm in a marriage that is not going well. I feel I am not handling my life properly, that my husband takes me for granted and I am overreacting to my children's problems. I've been thinking of seeing a psychiatrist although two of my friends have told me to save my money. Psychiatry did nothing for them.

Last night I ran across an article that said anyone who is considering therapy should "shop around" to make sure he (or she) can relate to the doctor. The piece listed some questions the prospective patient should ask the therapist. Here they are:

Where did you get your training?

What is your marital status?

How long have you been in practice?

What types of problems do you see?

What types do you LIKE to see?

What types do you LEAST like to see?

Do you routinely suggest a physical examination before therapy begins?

How long, on the average, do you see someone?

What is your fee?

Do you charge for missed sessions?

How far ahead can I cancel?

Ann, do you believe a person has the right to ask a doctor these questions if she is considering him as her therapist? What if the doctor refuses to answer? I'd like your thinking. -- Getting Ready To Make The Move

Dear Ready: The selection of a therapist is a big decision. The patient must have confidence and faith in the doctor. The questions listed are good ones. Ask them. A doctor who refused to answer every one of those questions would not rate very high with me. I'd shop till I found one who answered openly and without resentment.

Dear Ann: When I read the letter from "Why Me?" I knew I couldn't keep quiet any longer. I had to write.

I, too, am a homosexual -- male, 24 years old. I was in therapy for three years at my mother's insistence and am now convinced I will never be straight. I'm not happy about the situation but I can handle it.

The problems is my family. Although my parents know, no one else does. My relatives are all ultra-conservatives -- politically, socially and religion-wise. It would kill them if they knew that their brother, nephew, grandson, cousin was gay. The news nearly destroyed my parents six years ago and I'm not eager to put anyone else (including myself) through that hell again.

I hate living a lie. I don't want to deceive some nice woman, marry her and produce children (gays can, you know) just to please my family and cover up what I really am.

Unlike your other correspondent who asked "Why Me?" I am asking, "Why can't I BE me?" – Need An Answer

Dear Need: As far as I'm concerned you CAN. I would have no trouble accepting you as you are. The question is, do you have the courage to come out of the closet? Others have. Only you can make that decision.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers show you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex -- Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Planning session convenes

NEW MADRID — The New Madrid County Vocational School Chapter of Future Business Leaders of America was host recently for the District 15 Planning Session for 1976-77. Students and advisers from ten schools attended the dinner meeting, which was catered by the students in the institutional foods class at the school.

Following the dinner, the district president, Tamra Beaird, from the New Madrid County Chapter, presided over a short business meeting. At this time the plans for the new year were outlined.

The new Madrid County Vocational School Chapter of FBLA will be the host for the District Leadership Conference to be held March 5, 1977.

Papaya

Please, don't squeeze

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Don't squeeze the papaya. It bruises easily. Judge how ripe it is with your eye rather than with your fingers. Once you're a papaya-fancier, you'll find this rather easy to do.

As the noted botanist and cookbook writer, Alex D. Hawkes, says: "In supermarkets, the fruits are usually offered when only semiripe; they mature in a warm, shaded spot in the kitchen with some rapidity." When the skin color ranges from half yellow-green to all yellow-orange the papaya is fully ripe and may be refrigerated for about a week. If the papaya is all green when it comes into the kitchen, the ripening may take from three to five days.

Because lately papayas seem to be more abundant than heretofore, we've been looking into their background. And we blush to think that we didn't even know how they grow! Here Dr. Hawkes is a ready help. He writes that the papaya (Carica papaya) "is native to tropical America . . . and is one of the tropics' most extraordinary plants. It is not a tree — despite its appearance and its growth to ten feet or even more in height — but rather, a woody herbaceous plant, one of the most rapid-growing species known when maintained under optimum cultural conditions of rich, moist soil and constantly warm temperatures."

But recently we tried a Papaya Topping of which we are quite enamored. It's a heavenly combination of ripe papaya blended with banana, pineapple and lemon juice. We liked it so much over cut-up fresh fruit that we served it in very small portions to our taste-testers. Then we smuggled the rest of it into the refrigerator so that from time to time in the next couple of days we could gobble it up ourselves!

PAPAYA TOPPING

1 ripe papaya (about 1 pound), halved and seeded
1 ripe banana, sliced
1 can (8 ounces) crushed pineapple in its own juice
3 tablespoons lemon juice

With a spoon, scoop out the papaya pulp into an electric blender. Add banana, pineapple and lemon juice. Whirl just until pureed. Cover tightly and refrigerate; holds up well, keeping its flavor and color for several days. Makes about 2½ cups. Delicious served over sliced bananas and orange sections or a mixture of diced papaya and other fresh fruits.

Ann Landers

Prospective patients turn tables on psychiatrists

Dear Ann Landers: I'm in a marriage that is not going well. I feel I am not handling my life properly, that my husband takes me for granted and I am overreacting to my children's problems. I've been thinking of seeing a psychiatrist although two of my friends have told me to save my money. Psychiatry did nothing for them.

Last night I ran across an article that said anyone who is considering therapy should "shop around" to make sure he (or she) can relate to the doctor. The piece listed some questions the prospective patient should ask the therapist. Here they are:

Where did you get your training?

What is your marital status?

How long have you been in practice?

What types of problems do you see?

What types do you LIKE to see?

What types do you LEAST like to see?

Do you routinely suggest a physical examination before therapy begins?

How long, on the average, do you see someone?

What is your fee?

Do you charge for missed sessions?

How far ahead can I cancel?

Ann, do you believe a person has the right to ask a doctor these questions if she is considering him as her therapist? What if the doctor refuses to answer? I'd like your thinking. -- Getting Ready To Make The Move

Dear Ready: The selection of a therapist is a big decision. The patient must have confidence and faith in the doctor. The questions listed are good ones. Ask them. A doctor who refused to answer every one of those questions would not rate very high with me. I'd shop till I found one who answered openly and without resentment.

Dear Ann: When I read the letter from "Why Me?" I knew I couldn't keep quiet any longer. I had to write.

I, too, am a homosexual -- male, 24 years old. I was in therapy for three years at my mother's insistence and am now convinced I will never be straight. I'm not happy about the situation but I can handle it.

The problems is my family. Although my parents know, no one else does. My relatives are all ultra-conservatives -- politically, socially and religion-wise. It would kill them if they knew that their brother,nephew, grandson, cousin was gay. The news nearly destroyed my parents six years ago and I'm not eager to put anyone else (including myself) through that hell again.

I hate living a lie. I don't want to deceive some nice woman, marry her and produce children (gays can, you know) just to please my family and cover up what I really am.

Unlike your other correspondent who asked "Why Me?" I am asking, "Why can't I BE me?" -- Need An Answer

Dear Need: As far as I'm concerned you CAN. I would have no trouble accepting you as you are. The question is, do you have the courage to come out of the closet? Others have. Only you can make that decision.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers show you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex -- Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Planning session convenes

NEW MADRID — The New Madrid County Vocational School Chapter of Future Business Leaders of America was host recently for the District 15 Planning Session for 1976-77. Students and advisers from ten schools attended the dinner meeting, which was catered by the students in the institutional foods class at the school.

Following the dinner, the district president, Tamra Beaird, from the New Madrid County Chapter, presided over a short business meeting. At this time the plans for the new year were outlined.

The new Madrid County Vocational School Chapter of FBLA will be the host for the District Leadership Conference to be held March 5, 1977.

Reds still laughing about DH rule

NEW YORK (AP) — "The designated hitter is still a joke to baseball."

So spoke Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson.

He, Dan Driessen and the rest of the Reds are laughing all the way toward their second straight World Series championship.

Anderson hates the DH, an American League innovation in which a batter hits for the pitcher each time the pitcher's turn comes up.

It had never been employed in a World Series until this year, when it was foisted upon this October classic by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Driessen, the first and thus far only DH in the National League, rammed a home run and two other hits Tuesday night in firing the Reds to a 6-2 victory over the New York Yankees. Cincinnati now has a seemingly unbeatable 3-0 lead in this best-of-seven series.

The Reds can wrap it up tonight — unless Yankee right-hander Ed Figueroa or the weather can slow down the careening Big Red Machine. Gary Nolan, also a right-hander, will start for the Reds, bidding to become the first NL team since the 1921-22 New York Giants to win the World Series in successive years.

Rain has been forecast for tonight't fourth game. Billy Martin, the Yanks' feisty manager looking for a way to break the Reds' momentum, was asked if a delay might help achieve that end.

"Nah," he replied. "A postponement wouldn't do a thing for us now. It would've helped us before the Series began."

This series would seem to be virtually over. As Thurman Munson, the Yanks' catcher, muttered: "If we've been trying to make them overconfident, we've reached our limit."

When someone pointed out that no team in the previous 72 World Series had come back from a 3-0 deficit, Martin said: "Listen, we're no quitters. I'm not a quitter and my guys aren't quitters. We've come back before and we plan to come back again. We'll be out there fighting all the way. They'll still have to beat us ... But I must admit we're not in a very good position."

Beating the Yanks is all the Reds have been doing so far. They did all they had to do Tuesday night with a three-run burst in the second inning against Dock Ellis. And it was Driessen who started it all with an infield single off Ellis' glove.

He stole second and came home when George Foster pumped a one-bounce ground-rule double over the right-center field fence.

Johnny Bench followed with another infield single, this one off Chris Chambliss' glove at first. Cesar Geronimo's forceout grounder scored Foster to make it 2-0. Then Geronimo swiped second and came in on Dave Concepcion's single to left.

"Bloop hits, that's all we've been seeing," Martin moaned, picking up on his alibi of the first two games. "Bloopers, bloopers and more bloopers."

The next time Driessen batted he didn't exactly bloop the ball. He drove it hard and long, about 400 feet into the right-center field stands for a 4-0 Cincinnati lead.

Did those two diverse hits by Driessen, and the wasted two-out double he stroked in the sixth inning, change Anderson's view of the DH?

"I'm more convinced now than ever that the DH has no place in baseball," he said. "It's not right to send up a big bomber for the pitcher. It's a joke to baseball. The pitcher is a part of this game."

Then would he consider sending a pitcher to bat in view of the Reds' commanding lead? "No, we'll stay with the DH," he replied. "If that's the ground rule they want to lay down, we'll use it."

Under previous ground rules, Driessen might never have swung a bat in this World Series. Was he, then, pleased about being a DH? "In a situation like tonight, I like it," he acknowledged, "but I'd rather play."

The Yanks finally nicked winning rookie Pat Zachry for a run in the bottom of the fourth on Chambliss' single, a walk to Graig Nettles and Oscar Gamble's single to center. They sent Zachry to the showers in the seventh when Jim Mason, who had hit only one homer all season, hit another one — a line drive to right that cut the Reds' edge to 4-2.

What, Zachry was asked, had he thrown to the light-hitting Mason? "A home-run ball," he grinned. "It was a fat fastball right over the plate. The first pitch was a ball and I thought he'd be taking. He took it, all right — right out of the yard."

With Zachry out, Will McEnaney was in. He slammed the door on the Yanks with 2 1-3 innings of two-hit relief, a far cry from his generally poor showings this year. "I don't know how long it's been since I was as effective as this," he said. "I don't think I can remember that far back."

Grant Jackson, who had replaced Ellis in the fourth to shut down a Cincinnati threat, was sent packing by the Reds in the eighth when they tacked on their final two runs.

It was all over but the shouting — and it appears there will be none for the Yankee fans this year. There was little of it Tuesday night. Instead of the thousands who rampaged on the field last Thursday night when the AL pennant was theirs, there was one lone younster who ran onto the field in the ninth inning, shaking hands with a few of his Yankee heroes.

He was booed.

Blues' goalie change helps them stop red-hot Bruins

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Young goalie Ed Staniowski, thrust into the game four minutes into the second period, received a good alternative to warming up: his defense kept the opponents from shooting at the net.

"It would have been tough to come into the game without any warmup and face a number of shots in a hurry," the 21-year-old Blues' goalie said Tuesday night after St. Louis edged the Boston Bruins 6-5 in a National Hockey League game.

"Fortunately there were no shots for a while and I had time to loosen up and gain the tempo of the game," he said.

Staniowski was sent in to replace starter Ed Johnston, a former Bruins player, after Boston had surged to a 4-2 lead.

"I never had any thought I would have to come in," Staniowski said. "One minute I'm sitting on the bench and the next thing I know I'm in the game."

Blues Coach Emile Francis said he made the move to shake up his team.

"It wasn't that Ed (Johnston) was playing badly that I made the goaltending change," Francis said, "but sometimes shots can take funny bounces. Sometimes you can tighten up defensively with a change. The key was that they (Boston) didn't have any shot for six minutes after the change. Then we came on."

Staniowski allowed only one goal, the second of the game by Jean Ratelle, while Claude Larose scored twice and Garry Unger and Red Berenson once each as the Blues snapped the Bruins' winning streak at four games.

"I thought we deserved at least a tie after outshooting them 41-35," said Boston Coach Don Cherry. "We had the puck in their end for the last three minutes and couldn't score. The big thing was we couldn't put our shots on the net.

"They came on after the goaltending change," Cherry continued, "There's no doubt about it."

Ratelle and Peter McNab scored for Boston in the openinp period, but Chuck Lefley and Jerry Butler beat Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers, tying the score.

MU-Nebraska is top Big 8 battle

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A football battle in the classic Big Eight style is shaping up this weekend at Lincoln, and Missouri Coach Al Onofrio says he wishes he had more time to prepare for the third-ranked Nebraska Cornhuskers.

"Nebraska does so many things offensively and defensively that it presses you in practice to get everything done," Onofrio said following Tuesday's practice. The contest, featured on national television, promises a matchup between throwing quarterbacks Vince Ferragamo of the Huskers and Steve Pisarkiewicz of Missouri.

At Lincoln, a scout squad ran Missouri plays against Nebraska's top offensive and defensive football units during a two-hour workout.

Osborne said guard Dan Schmidt, defensive end Tony Samuel and fullback Dodie Donnell are recuperating from jaw, ankle and head injuries respectively. However, junior I-back Monte Anthony still is slowed by numerous leg injuries.

Iowa State fullback Jeff Curry is improving from a 10-day-old knee injury and should be ready for action Saturday against Colorado, says Coach Earle Bruce. Curry, a sophomore who earned his first start against Utah, suffered a knee injury early in that game and sat out the Cyclones' 21-17 victory at Missouri last week. Bruce sent Iowa State through a rugged two-hour workout Tuesday.

Kansas Coach Bud Moore said Tuesday he would not announce a backup quarterback until just before Saturday's game at Kansas State.

Dear Roone:

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Sportscaster Howard Cosell, who didn't exactly endear himself to Kansas City fans during the Royals' playoffs with the New York Yankees, is now officially in Sen. Thomas Eagleton's doghouse.

The Missouri Democrat made his feelings known in a letter to Roone Aldredge, president of ABC Sports.

"I realize that Cosell's obnoxiousness is the reason that ABC finds him so marketable," Eagleton said. "As a loyal, devoted baseball fan, I always have derived great comfort from the fact that our 'nation's pasttime' was free of Cosell. Hopefully, after the World Series, that will be the case once again."

Eagleton said he wanted to add his name "to the list of thousands" who opposed Cosell's broadcasting of the playoffs between the Royals and Yankees for the American League title. Cosell's thinly-veiled backing of the Yankees left Kansas City fans irate. It prompted the local ABC television affiliate to list the number of ABC in New York, telling viewers to call the New York office with their complaints rather than the Kansas City station.

Hoople picks Nebraska to beat MU Tigers Saturday

By Major Amos B. Hoople
Peerless Predictor

Egad, friends, no matter where one looks from East to West, North to South, there are headline matchups on the college front this Satuday.

Here is how they line up starting in the east and working across the country. At Annapolis, the Navy stalwarts entertain the rugged Pitt Panthers; at Philadelphia, Penn will host Yale in an important Ivy League contest, and at Morgantown, the hometown West Virginia Mountaineers will joust with the back-on-the-track Penn State Nittany Lions.

At College Park, the Maryland Terps and the Duke Blue Devils will meet in an Atlantic Coast Conference shootout. Meanwhile, the Kentucky Wildcats and Georgia Bulldogs will chew each other up in Lexington.

Moving out to the center of the country and starting west, we have Ohio State tackling Purdue and Michigan taking on Indiana in a pair of Big Ten encounters. And in the Big 8, there's a pair of tough ones on tap as Missouri's Tigers journey to Lincoln to meet the Nebraska Cornhuskers, and long-time rivals Oklahoma and Oklahoma State get together for the 71st time on the Sooners' field in Norman.

In the Far West, in a very, very important Pacific Eight showdown, and one that will go a long way toward determining the conference Rose Bowl representative, UCLA and California will get together on the latter's field.

In a pair of interesting independent contests, Texas Tech and Arizona will meet in Lubbock, and the Notre Dame Irish will go to Columbia to meet the South Carolina Gamecocks in their first-ever football meeting.

Here is how our scouts rate these contests. Navy is no match for Pittsburgh despite the latter's quarterback problems. Make it Pitt 35, Navy 10. We look for Yale to prevail 17-14, and for Penn State to take West Virginia 21-18.

The Maryland lads are in for a surprise as the Duke Blue Devils squeeze out a last-minute 22-17 victory. The Duke club has been getting better each week. And in another mild surprise, the Kentucky Wildcats will outlast Georgia to win, 28-25.

In the Big Ten contests, Ohio State will take Purdue 24-14, and Michigan will roll over Indiana, 42-13. Didn't we — kaff-kaff-kaff — tell you early in the year Michigan was the No. 1 team in the nation! The Nebraska-Missouri game is almost too close to call, but after running all pertinent information through the Hoople computers we give the nod to Nebraska, 28-21. The same is true of the Oklahoma Sooner-Oklahoma State engagement with our projections favoring Oklahoma to triumph, 30-20.

The UCLA-California donnybrook will be a classic showdown between the UCLA infantry tactics, good for approximately 380 yards per game, and the California aerial attack, good for about 250 yards each Saturday. We look for the Bruins to grind it out for a 26-18 triumph.

In the other contests mentioned above, watch for Texas Tech's Red Raiders to win, 24-14, and Notre Dame to down the South Carolina club, 28-21.

Otis wants back in Cards' lineup

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Jim Otis, who won a 1975 rushing title in the National Football League, isn't worried about defending his crown.

Instead the powerful fullback of the St. Louis Cardinals wonders what it will take to recapture the position he has lost in the club's starting lineup.

"I'm in the dark as much as anyone else," said Otis of his demotion to the role of a reserve following the rushing aggregate of 1,076 yards he compiled last year.

"The thing that no one knows is that I pulled a groin muscle against Green Bay," the defending National Conference titleholder said.

"But I wasn't going to stop playing because of an injury," he noted. "Now it's better and I'm not playing."

Joe Gibbs, the Cards' backfield coach, explained Otis' reduction in playing time as at least partially circumstantial during St. Louis' 21-17 victory Sunday over the Dallas Cowboys.

"Both backs were rested and doing well, so we stayed with them," Gibbs said of Terry Metcalf and Steve Jones, who started.

"We went to Jimmy when we were trying to grind out the yardage at the end," Gibbs added. "If we had lost the game, I'd probably be second-guessing myself."

Otis, a former Ohio State All-American in his seventh pro season, burst into prominence a year ago with his hammering-style runs and four 100-yard games.

This year, since gaining 140 yards in the Cards' opener against the Seattle Seahawks, he has added only 144 yards while serving as Jones' backup.

"I don't think I've changed from a year ago. I'm available to play," Otis said. "Last year I proved myself one of the best runners in all of pro football and I feel I'm still one of the best runners inside."

MSHSAA sets volleyball dates

The Missouri State High School Activities Association will hold a state volleyball tournament for the second time this season, according to an announcement Tuesday by the MSHSAA.

Qualifiers for the state tournament will be determined the week over Nov. 1-6, when 276 schools pair off for competition at sixteen district tournament sites. The district winners will advance to the state tournament, where they will be paired on a geographical basis for the first and second round matches Nov. 9.

The four surviving teams will advance to the state tournament, which will be held at Jefferson College in Hillsboro Nov. 13.

Locally, Southeast Missouri teams will be competing in either the Holcomb or Richland-Essex regional sites.

Participating at Holcomb will be Bernie, Cooter, Caruthersville, Delta C-7, Doniphan, Gideon, Hayti, Holcomb; Lilbourn, Malden, Matthews, New Madrid, Parma, Poplar Bluff, Portageville, Risco, South Pemiscot, North Pemiscot.

Vying for the district crown at the Richland site are Advance, Bell City, Bloomfield, Cape Central, Notre Dame, University High, Chaffee, Charleston, Dexter, East Prairie, Richland, Leopold, Woodland, Scott Central, Oran, Puxico, Illmo- Scott City, Sikeston and Zalma.

The winners of the two area Districts will battle at 5:30 p.m. Nov. 9 at Flat River Central High School in the opening round of the state tournament. The winner will play again at 8:00 p.m.

Reds still laughing about DH rule

NEW YORK (AP) — "The designated hitter is still a joke to baseball."

So spoke Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson.

He, Dan Driessen and the rest of the Reds are laughing all the way toward their second straight World Series championship.

Anderson hates the DH, an American League innovation in which a batter hits for the pitcher each time the pitcher's turn comes up.

It had never been employed in a World Series until this year, when it was foisted upon this October classic by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Grant Jackson, who had replaced Ellis in the fourth to shut down a Cincinnati threat, was sent packing by the Reds in the eighth when they tacked on their final two runs.

It was all over but the shouting — and it appears there will be none for the Yankee fans this year. There was little of it Tuesday night. Instead of the thousands who rampaged on the field last Thursday night when the AL pennant was theirs, there was one lone younster who ran onto the field in the ninth inning, shaking hands with a few of his Yankee heroes.

He was booed.

Blues' goalie change helps them stop red-hot Bruins

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Young goalie Ed Staniowski, thrust into the game four minutes into the second period, received a good alternative to warming up: his defense kept the opponents from shooting at the net.

"It would have been tough to come into the game without any warmup and face a number of shots in a hurry," the 21-year-old Blues' goalie said Tuesday night after St. Louis edged the Boston Bruins 6-5 in a National Hockey League game.

"Fortunately there were no shots for a while and I had time to loosen up and gain the tempo of the game," he said.

Staniowski was sent in to replace starter Ed Johnston, a former Bruins player, after Boston had surged to a 4-2 lead.

"I never had any thought I would have to come in," Staniowski said. "One minute I'm sitting on the bench and the next thing I know I'm in the game."

Blues Coach Emile Francis said he made the move to shake up his team.

"It wasn't that Ed (Johnston) was playing badly that I made the goaltending change," Francis said, "but sometimes shots can take funny bounces. Sometimes you can tighten up defensively with a change. The key was that they (Boston) didn't have any shot for six minutes after the change. Then we came on."

Staniowski allowed only one goal, the second of the game by Jean Ratelle, while Claude Larose scored twice and Garry Unger and Red Berenson once each as the Blues snapped the Bruins' winning streak at four games.

"I thought we deserved at least a tie after outshooting them 41-35," said Boston Coach Don Cherry. "We had the puck in their end for the last three minutes and couldn't score. The big thing was we couldn't put our shots on the net.

"They came on after the goaltending change," Cherry continued, "There's no doubt about it."

Ratelle and Peter McNab scored for Boston in the openinp period, but Chuck Lefley and Jerry Butler beat Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers, tying the score.

MU-Nebraska is top Big 8 battle

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A football battle in the classic Big Eight style is shaping up this weekend at Lincoln, and Missouri Coach Al Onofrio says he wishes he had more time to prepare for the third-ranked Nebraska Cornhuskers.

"Nebraska does so many things offensively and defensively that it presses you in practice to get everything done," Onofrio said following Tuesday's practice. The contest, featured on national television, promises a matchup between throwing quarterbacks Vince Ferragamo of the Huskers and Steve Pisarkiewicz of Missouri.

At Lincoln, a scout squad ran Missouri plays against Nebraska's top offensive and defensive football units during a two-hour workout.

Osborne said guard Dan Schmidt, defensive end Tony Samuel and fullback Dodie Donnell are recuperating from jaw, ankle and head injuries respectively. However, junior I-back Monte Anthony still is slowed by numerous leg injuries.

Iowa State fullback Jeff Curry is improving from a 10-day-old knee injury and should be ready for action Saturday against Colorado, says Coach Earle Bruce. Curry, a sophomore who earned his first start against Utah, suffered a knee injury early in that game and sat out the Cyclones' 21-17 victory at Missouri last week. Bruce sent Iowa State through a rugged two-hour workout Tuesday.

Kansas Coach Bud Moore said Tuesday he would not announce a backup quarterback until just before Saturday's game at Kansas State.

Dear Roone:

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Sportscaster Howard Cosell, who didn't exactly endear himself to Kansas City fans during the Royals' playoffs with the New York Yankees, is now officially in Sen. Thomas Eagleton's doghouse.

The Missouri Democrat made his feelings known in a letter to Roone Aldredge, president of ABC Sports.

"I realize that Cosell's obnoxiousness is the reason that ABC finds him so marketable," Eagleton said. "As a loyal, devoted baseball fan, I always have derived great comfort from the fact that our 'nation's pasttime' was free of Cosell. Hopefully, after the World Series, that will be the case once again."

Eagleton said he wanted to add his name "to the list of thousands" who opposed Cosell's broadcasting of the playoffs between the Royals and Yankees for the American League title. Cosell's thinly-veiled backing of the Yankees left Kansas City fans irate. It prompted the local ABC television affiliate to list the number of ABC in New York, telling viewers to call the New York office with their complaints rather than the Kansas City station.

Hoople picks Nebraska to beat MU Tigers Saturday

By Major Amos B. Hoople
Peerless Predictor

Egad, friends, no matter where one looks from East to West, North to South, there are headline matchups on the college front this Satuday.

Here is how they line up starting in the east and working across the country. At Annapolis, the Navy stalwarts entertain the rugged Pitt Panthers; at Philadelphia, Penn will host Yale in an important Ivy League contest, and at Morgantown, the hometown West Virginia Mountaineers will joust with the back-on-the-track Penn State Nittany Lions.

At College Park, the Maryland Terps and the Duke Blue Devils will meet in an Atlantic Coast Conference shootout. Meanwhile, the Kentucky Wildcats and Georgia Bulldogs will chew each other up in Lexington.

Moving out to the center of the country and starting west, we have Ohio State tackling Purdue and Michigan taking on Indiana in a pair of Big Ten encounters. And in the Big 8, there's a pair of tough ones on tap as Missouri's Tigers journey to Lincoln to meet the Nebraska Cornhuskers, and long-time rivals Oklahoma and Oklahoma State get together for the 71st time on the Sooners' field in Norman.

In the Far West, in a very, very important Pacific Eight showdown, and one that will go a long way toward determining the conference Rose Bowl representative, UCLA and California will get together on the latter's field.

In a pair of interesting independent contests, Texas Tech and Arizona will meet in Lubbock, and the Notre Dame Irish will go to Columbia to meet the South Carolina Gamecocks in their first-ever football meeting.

Here is how our scouts rate these contests. Navy is no match for Pittsburgh despite the latter's quarterback problems. Make it Pitt 35, Navy 10. We look for Yale to prevail 17-14, and for Penn State to take West Virginia 21-18.

The Maryland lads are in for a surprise as the Duke Blue Devils squeeze out a last-minute 22-17 victory. The Duke club has been getting better each week. And in another mild surprise, the Kentucky Wildcats will outlast Georgia to win, 28-25.

In the Big Ten contests, Ohio State will take Purdue 24-14, and Michigan will roll over Indiana, 42-13. Didn't we — kaff-kaff-kaff — tell you early in the year Michigan was the No. 1 team in the nation! The Nebraska-Missouri game is almost too close to call, but after running all pertinent information through the Hoople computers we give the nod to Nebraska, 28-21. The same is true of the Oklahoma Sooner-Oklahoma State engagement with our projections favoring Oklahoma to triumph, 30-20.

The UCLA-California donnybrook will be a classic showdown between the UCLA infantry tactics, good for approximately 380 yards per game, and the California aerial attack, good for about 250 yards each Saturday. We look for the Bruins to grind it out for a 26-18 triumph.

In the other contests mentioned above, watch for Texas Tech's Red Raiders to win, 24-14, and Notre Dame to down the South Carolina club, 28-21.

Otis wants back in Cards' lineup

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Jim Otis, who won a 1975 rushing title in the National Football League, isn't worried about defending his crown.

Instead the powerful fullback of the St. Louis Cardinals wonders what it will take to recapture the position he has lost in the club's starting lineup.

"I'm in the dark as much as anyone else," said Otis of his demotion to the role of a reserve following the rushing aggregate of 1,076 yards he compiled last year.

"The thing that no one knows is that I pulled a groin muscle against Green Bay," the defending National Conference titleholder said.

"But I wasn't going to stop playing because of an injury," he noted. "Now it's better and I'm not playing."

Joe Gibbs, the Cards' backfield coach, explained Otis' reduction in playing time as at least partially circumstantial during St. Louis' 21-17 victory Sunday over the Dallas Cowboys.

"Both backs were rested and doing well, so we stayed with them," Gibbs said of Terry Metcalf and Steve Jones, who started.

"We went to Jimmy when we were trying to grind out the yardage at the end," Gibbs added. "If we had lost the game, I'd probably be second-guessing myself."

Otis, a former Ohio State All-American in his seventh pro season, burst into prominence a year ago with his hammering-style runs and four 100-yard games.

This year, since gaining 140 yards in the Cards' opener against the Seattle Seahawks, he has added only 144 yards while serving as Jones' backup.

"I don't think I've changed from a year ago. I'm available to play," Otis said. "Last year I proved myself one of the best runners in all of pro football and I feel I'm still one of the best runners inside."

MSHSAA sets volleyball dates

The Missouri State High School Activities Association will hold a state volleyball tournament for the second time this season, according to an announcement Tuesday by the MSHSAA.

Qualifiers for the state tournament will be determined the week over Nov. 1-6, when 276 schools pair off for competition at sixteen district tournament sites. The district winners will advance to the state tournament, where they will be paired on a geographical basis for the first and second round matches Nov. 9.

The four surviving teams will advance to the state tournament, which will be held at Jefferson College in Hillsboro Nov. 13.

Locally, Southeast Missouri teams will be competing in either the Holcomb or Richland-Essex regional sites.

Participating at Holcomb will be Bernie, Cooter, Caruthersville, Delta C-7, Doniphan, Gideon, Hayti, Holcomb; Lilbourn, Malden, Matthews, New Madrid, Parma, Poplar Bluff, Portageville, Risco, South Pemiscot, North Pemiscot.

Vying for the district crown at the Richland site are Advance, Bell City, Bloomfield, Cape Central, Notre Dame, University High, Chaffee, Charleston, Dexter, East Prairie, Richland, Leopold, Woodland, Scott Central, Oran, Puxico, Illmo- Scott City, Sikeston and Zalma.

The winners of the two area Districts will battle at 5:30 p.m. Nov. 9 at Flat River Central High School in the opening round of the state tournament. The winner will play again at 8:00 p.m.

Dobler says his blocks were legal

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lee Roy Jordan's complaints about the blocking tactics of Conrad Dobler have fallen on deaf ears.

"I have no hard feelings about Lee Roy," an imperturbed Dobler said Tuesday. "I'll do the exact same things as I did before only hit him harder."

Jordan, the middle linebacker for the Dallas Cowboys, voiced his protest following a 21-17 loss Sunday to the St. Louis Cardinals in the National Football League.

But Dobler, the Cards' 255-pound right guard, immediately denied charges he blocked Jordan illegally from behind or had tackled him.

"I just got through reviewing the films," Dobler said of the bitterly contested struggle between the National Conference East rivals.

"He just got the heck blocked out of him," Dobler contended. "With some of the situations he got himself into he's probably lucky to be walking."

Jordan, who is in his 14th pro season, said he will complain to NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle and ask that Dobler's tactics be monitored more closely by officials.

"If he wants to take me to Rozelle I'll be more than happy to have him," Dobler responded. "His griping has no place in professional football.

"He was hit from behind but in a legitimate zone," Dobler said, referring to the distance within three yards of the line of scrimmage.

"I think Lee Roy is believing that the only way he can get blocked is to get tackled. What the heck's the big deal if I did tackle him? I'm trying to get a block off on a linebacker and he's grabbing my facemask.

"They're Super Bowl contenders. They're not supposed to be beaten," Dobler suggested of the Cowboys, who are tied atop NFC East standings at 5-1 with St. Louis.

"I don't care what people say about me," he added. "I'm not going to change the way I play."

Rookies and ABA alumni among NBA's new faces

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're one of those fans who can't tell the players without a scorecard, watch out for the upcoming pro basketball season.

Due to the demise of the American Basketball Association, more new faces than ever before will be breaking into the National Basketball Association this winter. Among the newcomers are the cream of the ABA as well as the top collegians, including many of the heros of the U.S. squad which captured the gold medal at the Montreal Olympics.

Under terms of the merger agreement, four teams were absorbed intact from the ABA, bringing the NBA roll to 22 clubs. Players from ABA teams which fell by the wayside went through a dispersal draft and were distributed among the 22 survivors.

And they'll be playing for an unusually large number of new coaches. Eight teams made coaching changes during the off-season, and a ninth, Detroit, will be starting its first full season under Herb Brown.

The new coaches are Hubie Brown, Atlanta; Tates Locke, Buffalo; Ed Badger, Chicago; Tom Nissalke, Houston; Jerry West, Los Angeles; Jack Ramsay, Portland; Doug Moe, San Antonio, and Dick Motta, Washington.

The Denver Nuggets, Indiana Pacers, New York Nets and San Antonio Spurs are the four teams absorbed from the ABA into the NBA.

Former ABA players absorbed by the dispersal draft or as free agents include Artis Gilmore, the top pick in the dispersal draft who has become the Chicago Bulls' starting center; center-forward Maurice Lucas, expected to strengthen Portland's front line; forward Marvin Barnes, who will give Detroit added scoring and rebounding; center Caldwell Jones, one of the better ABA pivotmen who should help the Philadelphia 76ers, and forward-center Moses Malone, picked by Portland in the dispersal draft but traded Tuesday to Buffalo.

Other ex-ABAers to find new homes include guards Mack Calvin and Don Chaney, at Los Angeles; center Mike Green, at Seattle; forward Willie Wise, at Denver, and guard Ticky Burden, with the New York Knicks.

All 17 players chosen on the first round of the college draft — the New York Knicks forfeited their pick in the abortive attempt to sign George McGinnis a year ago and the four ABA teams did not take part in the lottery — have been signed by their NBA teams, so there should be plenty of rookie talent around the league as well.

Among them are Olympians Mitch Kupchak, heir apparent to Wes Unseld at center for Washington; Adrian Dantley, the bullish Notre Dame forward expected to start for Buffalo; Scott May, the smooth cornerman from NCAA champion Indiana who will miss the early part of the season with Chicago due to mononucleosis, and Quinn Buckner, the Indiana playmaker who may be the quarterback the Milwaukee Bucks have lacked since Oscar Robertson retired.

Lohr says SeMo State Indians beginning to put it together

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The football Indians of Southeast Missouri State University are one step closer to a second consecutive MIAA crown after defeating the Bearcats of Northwest Missouri State University 17-12 at Maryville on Saturday.

"For the first time I felt we played with emotion, determination, and poise at the same time," said Head Coach Jim Lohr. "We've played with all three before at separate times, but we'd never put it all together," he continued.

Lohr was especially pleased with the showing of the Indian offensive unit. Despite strong winds which hampered the passing attack and kicking game, the Tribe racked up 254 yards in total offense.

"The first half our offense played very, very well," said the coach. "They didn't turn the ball over to Northwest one time," he continued, adding that the lack of Indian mistakes was a decisive factor in the victory.

The Indians were led by junior quarterback Don Backfisch of Dexter. Backfisch connected on six passes in 19 attempts for 101 yards and one touchdown, a 30-yard strike to sophomore split end David Gross of Cape Girardeau.

Gross led the Indians in receiving, snagging two passes for 43 yards and the touchdown. Following him were Terry Slattery, a senior flanker from Cape Girardeau, who also had two receptions going for 42 yards, junior tight end Randy Roddy of Baldwin with 10 yards on one reception, and senior split end Charles Williams of Washington, D.C., with six yards on one reception.

Junior running back Jack Gokin of Kirkwood and senior running back Roger Schmidt of Festus entered the contest nursing injuries sustained Oct. 9 against Central Missouri State University, and saw only limited action.

But the Indian ground attack barely missed a beat, rushing for 153 yards.

Filling in for Schmidt and Gokin were junior Rick Schutt of Overland, who picked up 82 yards on 19 carries, and Willie Wilson, a freshman from Paducah, Ky., who chipped in 25 yards on 10 attempts.

Backfisch emerged as the Tribe's second leading rusher in the contest with 38 yards on eight attempts.

Indian ball carriers were thrown for a loss on only one occasion, that occurring when Backfish was tackled behind the line of scrimmage before executing the option.

The Indian defense also staged a strong performance, yielding 177 yards on the ground and 54 through the air. Although Tribe defenders depended upon big plays a little more than the coach would have liked, he reported that he was pleased with the unit's performance.

"Defensively we had some big plays," he said. As an example, he cited Jim Limbaugh's interception with 47 seconds remaining in the game. Returning the interception 31 yards, the senior safety from Cape Girardeau put the Indian offense in good field position and halted a last-minute Bearcat drive.

Lohr also pointed to a fumble forced by Richard Tuck, a senior nose guard from St. Louis.

"Richard Tuck did real well with 17 tackles," said Lohr. "He sacked the quarterback four times for 60 yards in losses, one of which kept them out of field goal range," he continued.

The one area upon which the coach will concentrate as he prepares for the Oct. 29 contest with the Bulldogs of Northeast Missouri State University in Kirksville, is the defensive tackle positions. Southeast Missouri State has this week off.

"Kirksville is better than Maryville," said the coach, "and we needed to go into the game with a win," he added.

Lohr believes the Tribe's chances for a victory over the Bulldogs are enhanced as a result of Saturday's victory because the Indians played a good game against a good team and proved they could win.

The Tribe's record now stands at 5-2 overall and 2-0 in league play.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK — The Cincinnati Reds, behind the hitting of designated hitter Dan Driessen, beat the New York Yankees 6-2 and took a commanding 3-0 lead in the World Series.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

NEW YORK — Michigan maintained its No. 1 position in The Associated Press college football poll.

Dobler says his blocks were legal

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lee Roy Jordan's complaints about the blocking tactics of Conrad Dobler have fallen on deaf ears.

"I have no hard feelings about Lee Roy," an imperturbed Dobler said Tuesday. "I'll do the exact same things as I did before only hit him harder."

Jordan, the middle linebacker for the Dallas Cowboys, voiced his protest following a 21-17 loss Sunday to the St. Louis Cardinals in the National Football League.

But Dobler, the Cards' 255-pound right guard, immediately denied charges he blocked Jordan illegally from behind or had tackled him.

"I just got through reviewing the films," Dobler said of the bitterly contested struggle between the National Conference East rivals.

"He just got the heck blocked out of him," Dobler contended. "With some of the situations he got himself into he's probably lucky to be walking."

Jordan, who is in his 14th pro season, said he will complain to NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle and ask that Dobler's tactics be monitored more closely by officials.

"If he wants to take me to Rozelle I'll be more than happy to have him," Dobler responded. "His griping has no place in professional football.

"He was hit from behind but in a legitimate zone," Dobler said, referring to the distance within three yards of the line of scrimmage.

"I think Lee Roy is believing that the only way he can get blocked is to get tackled. What the heck's the big deal if I did tackle him? I'm trying to get a block off on a linebacker and he's grabbing my facemask.

"They're Super Bowl contenders. They're not supposed to be beaten," Dobler suggested of the Cowboys, who are tied atop NFC East standings at 5-1 with St. Louis.

"I don't care what people say about me," he added. "I'm not going to change the way I play."

Rookies and ABA alumni among NBA's new faces

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're one of those fans who can't tell the players without a scorecard, watch out for the upcoming pro basketball season.

Due to the demise of the American Basketball Association, more new faces than ever before will be breaking into the National Basketball Association this winter. Among the newcomers are the cream of the ABA as well as the top collegians, including many of the heros of the U.S. squad which captured the gold medal at the Montreal Olympics.

Under terms of the merger agreement, four teams were absorbed intact from the ABA, bringing the NBA roll to 22 clubs. Players from ABA teams which fell by the wayside went through a dispersal draft and were distributed among the 22 survivors.

And they'll be playing for an unusually large number of new coaches. Eight teams made coaching changes during the off-season, and a ninth, Detroit, will be starting its first full season under Herb Brown.

The new coaches are Hubie Brown, Atlanta; Tates Locke, Buffalo; Ed Badger, Chicago; Tom Nissalke, Houston; Jerry West, Los Angeles; Jack Ramsay, Portland; Doug Moe, San Antonio, and Dick Motta, Washington.

The Denver Nuggets, Indiana Pacers, New York Nets and San Antonio Spurs are the four teams absorbed from the ABA into the NBA.

Former ABA players absorbed by the dispersal draft or as free agents include Artis Gilmore, the top pick in the dispersal draft who has become the Chicago Bulls' starting center; center-forward Maurice Lucas, expected to strengthen Portland's front line; forward Marvin Barnes, who will give Detroit added scoring and rebounding; center Caldwell Jones, one of the better ABA pivotmen who should help the Philadelphia 76ers, and forward-center Moses Malone, picked by Portland in the dispersal draft but traded Tuesday to Buffalo.

Other ex-ABAers to find new homes include guards Mack Calvin and Don Chaney, at Los Angeles; center Mike Green, at Seattle; forward Willie Wise, at Denver, and guard Ticky Burden, with the New York Knicks.

All 17 players chosen on the first round of the college draft — the New York Knicks forfeited their pick in the abortive attempt to sign George McGinnis a year ago and the four ABA teams did not take part in the lottery — have been signed by their NBA teams, so there should be plenty of rookie talent around the league as well.

Among them are Olympians Mitch Kupchak, heir apparent to Wes Unseld at center for Washington; Adrian Dantley, the bullish Notre Dame forward expected to start for Buffalo; Scott May, the smooth cornerman from NCAA champion Indiana who will miss the early part of the season with Chicago due to mononucleosis, and Quinn Buckner, the Indiana playmaker who may be the quarterback the Milwaukee Bucks have lacked since Oscar Robertson retired.

Tripped up

Dallas Cowboys running back Charles Young (30) is tripped up by linebacker Mark Arneson (57) of the football Cardinals after a gain of two yards during the first quarter of the Cardinals' 21-17 victory over Dallas Sunday. Moving in to assist is Ray White (55), who was later injured and is out for the season. (AP Wirephoto)

Lohr says SeMo State Indians beginning to put it together

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The football Indians of Southeast Missouri State University are one step closer to a second consecutive MIAA crown after defeating the Bearcats of Northwest Missouri State University 17-12 at Maryville on Saturday.

"For the first time I felt we played with emotion, determination, and poise at the same time," said Head Coach Jim Lohr. "We've played with all three before at separate times, but we'd never put it all together," he continued.

Lohr was especially pleased with the showing of the Indian offensive unit. Despite strong winds which hampered the passing attack and kicking game, the Tribe racked up 254 yards in total offense.

"The first half our offense played very, very well," said the coach. "They didn't turn the ball over to Northwest one time," he continued, adding that the lack of Indian mistakes was a decisive factor in the victory.

The Indians were led by junior quarterback Don Backfisch of Dexter. Backfisch connected on six passes in 19 attempts for 101 yards and one touchdown, a 30-yard strike to sophomore split end David Gross of Cape Girardeau.

Gross led the Indians in receiving, snagging two passes for 43 yards and the touchdown. Following him were Terry Slattery, a senior flanker from Cape Girardeau, who also had two receptions going for 42 yards, junior tight end Randy Roddy of Baldwin with 10 yards on one reception, and senior split end Charles Williams of Washington, D.C., with six yards on one reception.

Junior running back Jack Gokin of Kirkwood and senior running back Roger Schmidt of Festus entered the contest nursing injuries sustained Oct. 9 against Central Missouri State University, and saw only limited action.

But the Indian ground attack barely missed a beat, rushing for 153 yards.

Filling in for Schmidt and Gokin were junior Rick Schutt of Overland, who picked up 82 yards on 19 carries, and Willie Wilson, a freshman from Paducah, Ky., who chipped in 25 yards on 10 attempts.

Backfisch emerged as the Tribe's second leading rusher in the contest with 38 yards on eight attempts.

Indian ball carriers were thrown for a loss on only one occasion, that occurring when Backfish was tackled behind the line of scrimmage before executing the option.

The Indian defense also staged a strong performance, yielding 177 yards on the ground and 54 through the air. Although Tribe defenders depended upon big plays a little more than the coach would have liked, he reported that he was pleased with the unit's performance.

"Defensively we had some big plays," he said. As an example, he cited Jim Limbaugh's interception with 47 seconds remaining in the game. Returning the interception 31 yards, the senior safety from Cape Girardeau put the Indian offense in good field position and halted a last-minute Bearcat drive.

Lohr also pointed to a fumble forced by Richard Tuck, a senior nose guard from St. Louis.

"Richard Tuck did real well with 17 tackles," said Lohr. "He sacked the quarterback four times for 60 yards in losses, one of which kept them out of field goal range," he continued.

The one area upon which the coach will concentrate as he prepares for the Oct. 29 contest with the Bulldogs of Northeast Missouri State University in Kirksville, is the defensive tackle positions. Southeast Missouri State has this week off.

"Kirksville is better than Maryville," said the coach, "and we needed to go into the game with a win," he added.

Lohr believes the Tribe's chances for a victory over the Bulldogs are enhanced as a result of Saturday's victory because the Indians played a good game against a good team and proved they could win.

The Tribe's record now stands at 5-2 overall and 2-0 in league play.

Dr. Lamb

Lose weight, but slowly

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 55 years old, 5 feet 6 and weigh 158 pounds. My blood pressure is 150 over 100. Also my husband is dying of cancer. Now my doctor says it's my few pounds overweight that is causing my blood pressure to be high.

I went on a 1000-calorie diet to lose weight and did lose a few pounds. But, I have to work hard and couldn't make it so I increased the diet to 1200 calories a day. Naturally I can't lose any more.

My doctor wants me to go to a psychologist and be hypnotized to see why I like to eat. I tried to explain it wasn't the desire to eat alone, but I needed food to have strength to do my job.

He said I would have to be down to 90 pounds to be weak from no food. Ever since I had this round with him the other day I have been very upset and my heart just pounds. I feel I have enough with a sick husband without this from him.

DEAR READER — Your doctor is right in trying to help you lose weight as the best way to get your blood pressure down. However, I question the way you are trying to do it.

You should be able to lose weight slowly if you are on a real 1200-calorie diet and are reasonably active. And it is true that you will have a loss of energy on a diet too low in calories, whether or not you have already lost all your excess fat deposits. Anyone who has been on a severely restricted diet knows this. Loss of energy is par for the course. I agree it is hard to work and stay on a 1000-calorie diet very long.

May I suggest that you really stick religiously to a 1200 calorie diet and try to include at least 30 minutes of walking a day. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet constructed as a balanced 1200-calorie plan. Try it with some regular exercise and it will do the trick for you gradually.

Your pressure may be lower when you have less stress than you have now. Life situations are often a factor in increasing the blood pressure.

Others who want information on the Weight Losing Diet can send 50 cents for it. Send your request to Dr. Lamb in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a friend who is losing his hair. He has to keep combing his hair different to cover up the thin places. I feel he should see a doctor and that he probably lacks some vitamins in his meals. He says he feels good and that it will grow back again. I will appreciate any information on his.

DEAR READER — If a person is eating a balanced diet containing sufficient vitamins, taking additional vitamins will not prevent loss of hair.

It is true that a diet deficient in protein can lead to hair loss. Most people, however, get plenty of protein and usually far more than needed.

Premature hair loss can be associated with poor nutrition, any illness, and even occurs as a complication of pregnancy about three months after the baby is born. In these situations the baldness or hair loss is temporary.

Hereditary factors are a major reason for early baldness. In any case I agree that anyone who has excessive loss of hair at a young age should see a doctor, preferably a dermatologist since they specialize in disorders of the skin.

It is normal to lose about 70 hairs each day. The life cycle of a hair is from two to six years and the hair follicle has a resting period without hair for about three months.

MUSICAL SCULPTURE

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A halfton sculpture at the University of Akron's new Music Speech and Theater Arts building can be played as a musical instrument.

The sculpture is by Pennsylvania artist Harry Bertoia and consists of five shimmering clusters of flexible copper alloy rods, reminiscent of reeds or cattails, ranging in height from four feet to more than eight feet.

When vibrated, they produce reverberating tones that are evocative of gongs, chimes, cathedral bells and organ crescendoes.

Dr. Lamb

Lose weight, but slowly

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 55 years old, 5 feet 6 and weigh 158 pounds. My blood pressure is 150 over 100. Also my husband is dying of cancer. Now my doctor says it's my few pounds overweight that is causing my blood pressure to be high.

I went on a 1000-calorie diet to lose weight and did lose a few pounds. But, I have to work hard and couldn't make it so I increased the diet to 1200 calories a day. Naturally I can't lose any more.

My doctor wants me to go to a psychologist and be hypnotized to see why I like to eat. I tried to explain it wasn't the desire to eat alone, but I needed food to have strength to do my job.

He said I would have to be down to 90 pounds to be weak from no food. Ever since I had this round with him the other day I have been very upset and my heart just pounds. I feel I have enough with a sick husband without this from him.

DEAR READER — Your doctor is right in trying to help you lose weight as the best way to get your blood pressure down. However, I question the way you are trying to do it.

You should be able to lose weight slowly if you are on a real 1200-calorie diet and are reasonably active. And it is true that you will have a loss of energy on a diet too low in calories, whether or not you have already lost all your excess fat deposits. Anyone who has been on a severely restricted diet knows this. Loss of energy is par for the course. I agree it is hard to work and stay on a 1000-calorie diet very long.

May I suggest that you really stick religiously to a 1200 calorie diet and try to include at least 30 minutes of walking a day. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet constructed as a balanced 1200-calorie plan. Try it with some regular exercise and it will do the trick for you gradually.

Your pressure may be lower when you have less stress than you have now. Life situations are often a factor in increasing the blood pressure.

Others who want information on the Weight Losing Diet can send 50 cents for it. Send your request to Dr. Lamb in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a friend who is losing his hair. He has to keep combing his hair different to cover up the thin places. I feel he should see a doctor and that he probably lacks some vitamins in his meals. He says he feels good and that it will grow back again. I will appreciate any information on his.

DEAR READER — If a person is eating a balanced diet containing sufficient vitamins, taking additional vitamins will not prevent loss of hair.

It is true that a diet deficient in protein can lead to hair loss. Most people, however, get plenty of protein and usually far more than needed.

Premature hair loss can be associated with poor nutrition, any illness, and even occurs as a complication of pregnancy about three months after the baby is born. In these situations the baldness or hair loss is temporary.

Hereditary factors are a major reason for early baldness. In any case I agree that anyone who has excessive loss of hair at a young age should see a doctor, preferably a dermatologist since they specialize in disorders of the skin.

It is normal to lose about 70 hairs each day. The life cycle of a hair is from two to six years and the hair follicle has a resting period without hair for about three months.

MUSICAL SCULPTURE

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A halfton sculpture at the University of Akron's new Music Speech and Theater Arts building can be played as a musical instrument.

The sculpture is by Pennsylvania artist Harry Bertoia and consists of five shimmering clusters of flexible copper alloy rods, reminiscent of reeds or cattails, ranging in height from four feet to more than eight feet.

When vibrated, they produce reverberating tones that are evocative of gongs, chimes, cathedral bells and organ crescendoes.

Garrett family doing missionary work

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa — The Garretts, Phil, Marilyn, Mike and Jim — left Cedar Rapids in mid-September for a year's service in a community at Lapu-lapu in the Philippine Islands.

Garrett is a doctor of veterinary medicine and a skilled illustrator with a master's degree in anatomy. He taught in the School of Veterinary Medicine at the University of Missouri for 10 years prior to entering government service as a meat inspector for Wilson & Co. in Cedar Rapids.

Mrs. Garrett is the daughter of F. A. Mitchell of Catron Route One and a graduate of Canalou High School and the University of Missouri, where she earned a bachelor's degree in home economics.

The Garrett family struggled with the invitation to give a year of their lives for work in this primitive location (no electricity, etc.), in contrast with other less demanding vehicles for service, but Lapu-lapu won out. The family will rent their home in Cedar Rapids and plan to return after their sojourn in the east.

Garrett's work will be to help train the native people in more efficient agriculture and animal husbandry procedures. Their primary industry at this point is the production of rope by hand methods. The chief work of the task force will be to thelp the community become self-sufficient economically and in spirit. The program is under the sponsorship of the Ecumenical Institute in Chicago.

A mission commission has voted to support the Garretts, who will be working without salary and plan to pay many of their own expenses.

Tickets are available for the farmers banquet

Tickets for the 1976 Farmers' Recognition Banquet are now being sold by members of Sikeston service clubs, including Lions, Kiwanis, Rotary, Optimists, Jaycees and the Sikeston Area Chamber of Commerce.

This year's banquet will be held at 6:30 p.m. Nov. 11 in the Sikeston High School cafetorium. It will honor 16 farm families from Scott, Stoddard, Mississippi and New Madrid counties.

The Sikeston Jaycees will honor an Outstanding Young Farmer of the Year who will receive $125 in U.S. savings bonds donated by Sikeston area financial institutions.

Entertainment, a guest speaker and an auction will be included on the program in addition to the awards.

94th CONGRESS IN REVIEW

The 94th Congress is now history, with this year to be remembered as the busiest (in terms of hours in session and bills considered) since 1972. The 94th produced some major legislative accomplishments as well as some disappointments. In this column, I would like to review some of the achievements.

BUDGET REFORM: This is a subject which the public at large has heard little about, but it may be remembered as the most significant achievement of the 94th. Our new budgeting procedures set strict ceilings on appropriations and expedite our work. Under the new procedures, the 94th Congress was able to complete action on all appropriations bills before the end of the fiscal year -- the first time in 25 years we have been able to do this.

GOVERNMENT IN THE SUNSHINE: The "sunshine law" passed by this Congress requires about 50 government agencies to conduct open and public meetings. Earlier, Congress decreed that its own hearings and executive sessions henceforth would be open to the public.

OLDER AMERICANS ACT: Congress passed a three-year extension of this bill, under which myriad services and programs are provided to our senior citizens.

TOXIC SUBSTANCES: This law establishes tough new standards for testing and production of potentially dangerous chemicals. It will help us avoid ecological disasters like the Kepone poisoning of the James River in Virginia.

RAILROAD REORGANIZATION: Congress made a major start toward revitalization of our railroads with enactment of a $6 - billion program to rebuild railbeds in the northeast and midwest. The bill also established Conrail, which takes over operation of failing northeastern railroads. Congress also restored full funding to Amtrak, maintaining all Amtrak lines operating in Missouri.

REVENUE SHARING: Legislation passed by this Congress extends Revenue Sharing for almost four years, insuring a continued flow of needed money to our local and state governments. The bill passed by Congress also provides for a major study of possible improvements in the program, and this study could bring significant benefits to Missouri.

TAX BILL: While the tax bill passed by this congress still leaves much to be desired in the way of tax reform, it does provide some improvements. Among these are extension of tax cuts for low and moderate income families, increase of the minimum tax rate paid by the wealthy, and major changes in the estate and gift tax laws.

VETERANS: Legislation passed by this Congress included a new "GI Bill", as well as cost-of-living increases for veterans receiving disability benefits.

JOBS: A major public works jobs bill will provide up to 300,000 public works jobs in both the public and private sectors. Changes approved in our unemployment compensation program extends ceverage to more workers and provides more financial support for unemployment insurance.

Driving in Turkey is free-for-all

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — An average of 6,000 persons die on Turkish roads every year. Traffic accident and death rates here are among the highest in the world and are on the rise.

Turkey, with its population of 40 million, claims 6 per cent of the world's traffic fatalities. Authorities estimate that traffic deaths will reach an unprecedented 10,000 in 1976.

In the first seven months of this year, 4,526 persons were killed in traffic accidents and thousands injured. On the first three days of August, 50 lives were lost — two of them traffic policemen on motorcycles.

Many causes are cited for the mess which is Turkish traffic. According to Premier Suleyman Demirel, the inadequacy of roads is an important factor. He has pointed out that the main thoroughfare connecting Turkey's largest cities, Ankara and Istanbul, was built to accommodate daily traffic of 10,000 vehicles, but it now carries 40,000.

Highway improvement has not caught up with a significant boost in auto registration. The number of cars has risen from 153,000 to 393,000 in the last four years and the number of other motor vehicles has nearly doubled.

Interior Ministry statistics list driver negligence as the cause of 70 per cent of all accidents.

Most Turks are daredevil drivers with little respect for traffic regulations. Red lights are not necessarily considered stop signals. If the other side seems clear, few Turkish drivers can resist the temptation to speed through a red light. At night, many vehicles do not bother to dim their bright lights and blind approaching cars.

Trucks park on highways without any warning lights.

Bus and truck drivers are overworked and have been known to fall asleep at the wheel. In the cities, jay-walking is virtually a national sport.

Writings painted on to the back windows of taxies and buses say more about the Turkish philosophy of driving than the official book of traffic rules. Mostly in rhyme, they read: "This is fate, my friend," or "Do not come near you will be smashed, do not attempt to pass you shall regret, or "If you are a lover, play the guitar; if you are a driver step on the gas pedal."

Turkish traffic acquired a semblance of order when the military took over for a few months in 1971, during a period of martial law. Thousands of speeding drivers and jay-walkers were fined. But troops are back in their barracks now, having left the roads to civilian traffic police who stand and watch as every rule in the book is flouted.

A new traffic bill increasing fines and bringing prison terms for traffic violations has been introduced in the Parliament. But the legislature has recessed without tackling it this year.

Inflation has rendered fines — $2 for passing through a red light — meaningless. According to the new bill, fines are to be upped as much as $60 or $70.

Interior Minister Oguzhan Asilturk has promised to double the 5,000-man traffic police force. But it is estimated that it will take at least a year before the passage of the new bill and its enforcement can be realized.

In the meantime, Turkish roads are likely to remain a free-for-all, with towing trucks busy and first aid stations overcrowded.

The boss says he admires a man who speaks his mind — meaning the boss's.

The speediest shift in the auto industry is the one made by the salesman when you begin to lose interest.

Driving in Turkey is free-for-all

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — An average of 6,000 persons die on Turkish roads every year. Traffic accident and death rates here are among the highest in the world and are on the rise.

Turkey, with its population of 40 million, claims 6 per cent of the world's traffic fatalities. Authorities estimate that traffic deaths will reach an unprecedented 10,000 in 1976.

In the first seven months of this year, 4,526 persons were killed in traffic accidents and thousands injured. On the first three days of August, 50 lives were lost — two of them traffic policemen on motorcycles.

"Hereafter when we come here you're not to wear those corduroy pants."

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 20th, the 294th day of 1976. There are 72 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1918, Germany accepted U.S. terms to ed World War One and ordered German submarines to their home bases.

On this date:

In 1632, the British architect, Sir Christopher Wren, was born in Wiltshire, England.

In 1740, Maria Theresa became ruler of Austria, Hungary and Bohemia.

In 1941, during World War II, a state of siege was declared in Moscow.

In 1945, Arab nations formed a league and warned that creation of a Jewish state in the Middle East could lead to war.

In 1964, Former President Herbert Hoover died in New York City at the age of 90.

In 1968, Jacqueline Kennedy and Aristotle Onassis were married on his private island, Skorpios, in the Ionian Sea.

In 1973, President Richard M. Nixon dismissed Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox and Deputy Attorney General William Ruckelshaus. Attorney General Elliot Richardson resigned because of the firings.

Ten years ago: Two Jewish authors, Shumuel Yosef Agnon and Nelly Sachs, were named joint winners of the Nobel Prize for Literature.

Five years ago: The Nobel Peace Prize went to Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany.

One year ago: The United States and the Soviet Union agreed on a five-year deal for American grain sales to the Soviets.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, it was reported that despite British hinderance, American producers were able to send so much tobacco to France that the market was glutted and prices might fall.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 20th, the 294th day of 1976. There are 72 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1918, Germany accepted U.S. terms to ed World War One and ordered German submarines to their home bases.

On this date:

In 1632, the British architect, Sir Christopher Wren, was born in Wiltshire, England.

In 1740, Maria Theresa became ruler of Austria, Hungary and Bohemia.

In 1941, during World War II, a state of siege was declared in Moscow.

In 1945, Arab nations formed a league and warned that creation of a Jewish state in the Middle East could lead to war.

In 1964, Former President Herbert Hoover died in New York City at the age of 90.

In 1968, Jacqueline Kennedy and Aristotle Onassis were married on his private island, Skorpios, in the Ionian Sea.

In 1973, President Richard M. Nixon dismissed Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox and Deputy Attorney General William Ruckelshaus. Attorney General Elliot Richardson resigned because of the firings.

Ten years ago: Two Jewish authors, Shumuel Yosef Agnon and Nelly Sachs, were named joint winners of the Nobel Prize for Literature.

Five years ago: The Nobel Peace Prize went to Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany.

One year ago: The United States and the Soviet Union agreed on a five-year deal for American grain sales to the Soviets.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, it was reported that despite British hinderance, American producers were able to send so much tobacco to France that the market was glutted and prices might fall.

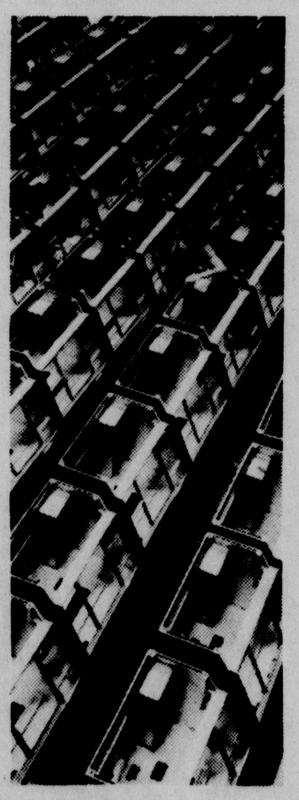
PRESIDENT FORD is strengthening his campaign pitch to independent and Democratic voters with a newly formed Citizens for Ford committee with the task of persuading "non-Republicans" to ignore party labels Nov. 2.

COLD COMFORT combined with high-fashion is available to the fashion-conscious this winter with this hood and muff of wolf fur shown at the Frankfurt, West Germany, fur show.



CHERCHEZ LA FEMME, as they say in mystery stories, but the only mystery here might be what Olivia Reza (spot her yet?) is doing in the midst of massed electronic consoles designed to provide the Navy with instantaneous electronic readings of action in combat zones. She's checking the units under construction at Fullerton, Calif., Hughes Aircraft Co. facilities.

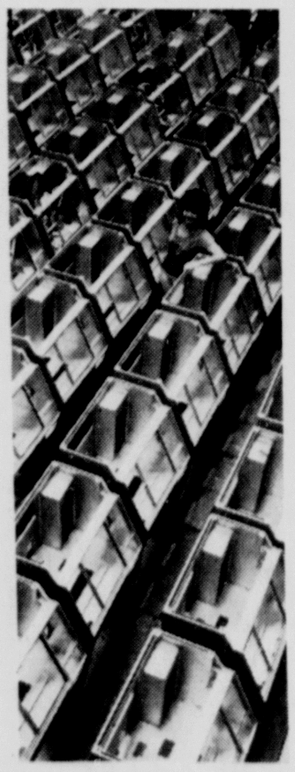
PRESIDENT FORD is strengthening his campaign pitch to independent and Democratic voters with a newly formed Citizens for Ford committee with the task of persuading "non-Republicans" to ignore party labels Nov. 2.

COLD COMFORT combined with high-fashion is available to the fashion-conscious this winter with this hood and muff of wolf fur shown at the Frankfurt, West Germany, fur show.



CHERCHEZ LA FEMME, as they say in mystery stories, but the only mystery here might be what Olivia Reza (spot her yet?) is doing in the midst of massed electronic consoles designed to provide the Navy with instantaneous electronic readings of action in combat zones. She's checking the units under construction at Fullerton, Calif., Hughes Aircraft Co. facilities.

CAR MURALS

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Terry Troxell is a van muralist.

In the past three years he has painted murals on some 300 vans and more than 50 pickup trucks. Murals on vans are becoming common on Washington highways.

The van muralist is 28, and has a solid background in art. He was a member of an airplane manufacturer's art department and his father is a Seattle artist.

To paint murals, he uses a template cut from thin cardboard and color-tinted lacquer with a tiny spray gun.

War crimes trial set

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nightmare of wartime Europe will be relived in three U.S courtrooms next month as federal authorities attempt to deport three aging immigrants accused of atrocities against Jews more than 30 years ago.

The hearings before federal immigration judges in New Britain, Conn., Baltimore and New York City will be, in effect, this country's first trials for crimes committed during World War II.

The charges mark a turning point in the government's efforts to track down and deport Nazi war criminals living in the United States.

In these cases and others to come, government lawyers are relying on the memories of Jews who watched in horror as their friends and neighbors were beaten and slain by the hundreds in prisons and concentration camps.

About 20 who escaped the persecution and now live in Israel will be brought to the United States to testify in the three hearingu, said Verne Jervis, spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The defendants are Bronius Kaminskas, a 73-year-old Lithuanian who lives alone in a 20-a-week room in Hartford, Conn.; Karlis Detlavs, 65, who retired from his Baltimore factory job after losing a leg to cancer three years ago; and Boleslavs Maikovskis, a 72-year-old retired carpenter in Mineola, N.Y.

Kaminskas and Detlavs have told reporters they are innocent of the charges. Maikovskis has refused to see reporters and has made no comment on the charges.

In legal terms, Detlavs and Maikovskis are charged with entering the United States illegally by lying about their wartime activities. Kaminskas, because of a slight difference in the law at the time he entered the country, is charged with being ineligible for U.S. residence because of war crimes.

Though the charges are based on immigration law, the evidence will focus almost entirely on the atrocities the three allegedly committed. Jervis said the only government witnesses against the three will be the Israeli Jews who claim to have seen the murders and beatings.

The defendants, of course, are entitled to be represented by attorneys and to present testimony from witnesses.

The filing of charges was only a single step in what could be years of court hearings. Any of the Nov. 15 hearings could be postponed at the request of the individual involved.

The INS judges could take several weeks to announce their decisions. The loser, whether it's the defendant or the agency, may appeal to the Board of Immigration Appeals. The defendant, if he loses there, could take the case to a the courts and ultimately to the Supreme Court. The agency, however, cannot appeal the board's decision to the courts.

Meantime, INS investigators are gathering evidence in 77 other cases that could lead to deportation orders or lawsuits to strip naturalized Americans of their citizenship.

The agency has announced plans to launch denaturalization proceedings against four accused war criminals but will not identify them until the suits are filed. This requires Justice Department approval.

Through the 1950s and 1960s, Jervis said, the INS periodically looked into war crimes cases, but no charges were brought and the effort ranked low in priority.

The current effort began three years ago when Leonard F. Chapman took office as INS commissioner and was questioned by the House immigration subcommittee.

"It was clear to him that (the war crimes investigation) was one of the things the subcommittee wanted him to do," Jervis said.

Subcommittee Chairman Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., and member Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., in particular have pushed for a probe.

"The interest of the subcommittee was certainly a factor" in raising the effort to a high priority in the agency, Jervis acknowledged.

Eilberg frequently has complained that the agency has taken much too long to bring the first charges.

One explanation, Jervis said, is that "the size and scope and depth of this is something new for this agency. A worldwide investigation is a new experience for us."

There are only three previous cases in which the INS has attempted to deport immigrants for alleged war crimes.

Deportation charges were initiated against Hermione Braunsteiner Ryan of New York City in 1972. During the process, the West German government initiated extradition proceedings. She was extradited to West Germany in August 1973, and is now on trial there for murder.

A deportation case was brought in 1953 against Andrija Artukovic of Seal Beach, Calif., who is wanted in Yugoslavia on charges of murdering thousands of Serbs, Jews and gypsies. Six years later, a federal court commissioner ruled that he could not be returned to Yugoslavia because he was likely to be the target of political persecution there.

Kennett woman injured in one car accident

KENNETT — A one-car accident early today resulted in minor injuries to a Kennett woman, according to the highway patrol.

Alice Ann Wright, 37, of Kennett, driver of a westbound car, was injured when her car missed a wooden bridge at the intersection of Route U and a township road east of town. The car fell off the bridge and landed on its top in about three feet of water.

She was taken to Dunklin County Memorial Hospital here.

Teasdale announces new farm fuel policy

FLAT RIVER — Joseph P. Teasdale, Democratic candidate for governor, pledged today in a speech at Mineral Area Junior College that as governor he would initiate a farm fuel policy aimed at creating guaranteed fuel reserves for farmers in Missouri.

"We must have a policy, Teasdale said, "that guarantees to our farmers and our consumers that sufficient fuel and fertilizer will be available to produce the food and fiber necessary to maintain our high standard of living here at home and maintain our export markets.

"It is absolutely imperative that an agriculture reserve of our energy supply be set aside and protected from other uses. America's and Missouri's major industry, our food supply, is far too important to be allowed to exist at the whim of a federal energy bureaucrat and at the mercy of some Arab sheik.

"One of my first acts as governor will be to instruct my new director of agriculture to initiate a farm fuel policy. It will be a major responsibility of my new director to develop a plan -- in cooperation with the Federal Energy Administration and with the advice of my Farm Council -- which will insure our farmers the fuel they need."

4 killed, 50 missing in Mississippi River ferry, cargo ship collision

LULING, La. (AP) — Four people were killed and 50 were reported missing today after a cargo ship crashed broadside into a fully loaded Mississippi River ferry, the St. Charles Parish Sheriff's office said.

"The ferry was reported to have a full load of aproximately 20 cars with an unknown number of occupants and aproximately 50 walk-on passengers, although the exact number of persons involved is unknown," said Jim Morrison, a U.S. Cost Guard spokesman.

One reporter on the scene said four bodies had been located. A sister ferry rushed back to the sinking vessel and rescued several persons from about 100 yards out in the swift running water.

The stricken ferry, on a rush-hour run between Destrehan and Luling about 20 miles upriver from New Orleans, was upended in the water and sank in about 15 minutes. The cargo ship went upriver and anchored.

"We saw a cargo ship moving up river, approaching the ferry," said Jerry Mayo, a worker on the rescue ferry. "It blew its horn four or five times.

"The ship hit the ferry broadside, ran completely over it," he said.

Mayo said the cargo ship pushed the ferry upriver and finally turned it over.

The Coast Guard said the accident happened shortly before 6:30 a.m. CDT as the sun was coming up. There was no fog.

Mingo to get $302,000

DENVER— The Mingo Wildlife Refuge near Puxico has been allotted $302,000, as part of the Bicentennial Land Heritage Program, according to U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials.

The program, announced by President Gerald Ford, would provide more than $60.1 million for fish and wildlife refuge support in the Missouri Basin Region, according to Region Director Harvey Willoughby.

Willouoghby said "Although public visitation to the National Wildlife refuge system has quadripled in the past 20 years to 30 million annually, and the system's size has doubled, staffing for the system has not been increased in 10 years, nor has maintenance funding been adequate.

He said "The President's proposal, while providing $31 million nationallv for acquisition of 111,000 acres of habitat for endangered species, additions to existing refuges, and acquisition of existing refuge inholdings also would provide over $60 million for improvements and maintenance in the Missouri Basin alone, over a 10 year period."

Low water cruise comments voiced on river operations

CAIRO, Ill. — Generally favorable comments were given on the Army Corps of Engineers operation of the Mississippi River at a public hearing held here Monday.

In the annual low water cruise of the Mississippi River Commission aboard the Corps' riverboat Mississippi, spokesmen from levee and drainage districts bordering the river from here to Memphis, Tenn., voiced appreciation for the corps' efforts in controlling floods and maintaining the levees.

The Mississippi Commission was established in 1973 to provide a public forum for information on the corps' river operations. Each year, they make a low water cruise during the fall and a high water cruise each spring to hold hearings on the corps' performance.

The commission president, Maj. Gen. F. P. Koisch, said in opening remarks that he thought the commission was doing a good job in satisfying the needs of Mississippi Valley residents, and he hoped the public hearing would indicate ways to do a better job.

Among those addressing the commission, was Harry H. Bach, who represented St. John's Bayou Basin Drainage District.

Bach asked the MRC for a progress report on the drainage program for the St. John's area in Mississippi County. Gen. Koisch replied that the bill authorizing the $300,000 phase one study was before President Gerald R. Ford. The bill will either be signed or vetoed by Oct. 23, the general said.

The proposal for the bayou calls for the local authorities to pay for maintenance of pumping facilities after the federal government builds them, he added.

Another Mississippi County resident, Glenn Ault Jr., Consolidated Drainage District No. 1 president, asked the commission for aid in convincing the U.S. Senate and House of representatives that the proposed St. John project was a flood control measure and not a drainage operation.

Ault explained the difference as local government being required to pay operating and maintenance costs in drainage projects. However, in flood control projects, the federal government pays operating expenses.

The general advised the group to continue requests for flood control designation with their congressman.

Chaffee schools would lose $600,000 if Amendment 2 passes

CHAFFEE— The Chaffee R-2 School District Board of Education went on record Monday night against Constitutional Amendment No. 2 in the Nov. 2 general election, noting that it would mean a loss of $60,000 in state aid to the school district for fiscal year 1978-79 if the amendment suould pass.

The board asked all parents of children in Chaffee schools to vote against the amendment.

Martha Adams and Nelda Crader, grade school teachers and representatives of the Community Teachers Association, presented the Chaffee teachers' philosophy of education for use in the drafting of new policies for the district. Suggestions from the faculty on policy making were given to Betty Montgomery, chairman of the policy committee.

In other business, it was noted that the school quarter closes Oct. 29, with all report cards to be issued Nov. 3.

Supt. Howard Reed, who has been appointed to the Cape Girardeau Vocational School advisory committee, reported that, at present, only junior and senior students will be accepted at the Cape Girardeau Vocational School.

The board was told that the Chaffee Jaycees will sponsor a dance marathon at 8 p.m. Nov. 26 and 27 at the old high school gymnasium. The Jaycees will chaperone the dance and Eddie Martin Sound System will donate the sound system. All proceeds will go to the Chaffee High School senior class.

Permission was granted to Donna Hess, representing the Catholic Youth Council Club to use the old gymnasium every Wednesday night from 6:30 to 9 p.m. In addition St. Ambrose Elementary School has been given permission to use the same facility for practice and several games which have already been scheduled.

Elementary Principal Bill Bradshaw reported on the Kindergarten Inventory of Developmental Skills tests which were given the first day of school to kindergarten students to determine their readiness level.Bradshaw said he will have a full report on the outcome of the testing for parents at a later date.

An expanded summer school program was approved under the Title I program, with some preschool children to be included in next summer's program, Bradshaw added.

CAR MURALS

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Terry Troxell is a van muralist.

In the past three years he has painted murals on some 300 vans and more than 50 pickup trucks. Murals on vans are becoming common on Washington highways.

The van muralist is 28, and has a solid background in art. He was a member of an airplane manufacturer's art department and his father is a Seattle artist.

To paint murals, he uses a template cut from thin cardboard and color-tinted lacquer with a tiny spray gun.

War crimes trial set

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nightmare of wartime Europe will be relived in three U.S courtrooms next month as federal authorities attempt to deport three aging immigrants accused of atrocities against Jews more than 30 years ago.

The hearings before federal immigration judges in New Britain, Conn., Baltimore and New York City will be, in effect, this country's first trials for crimes committed during World War II.

The charges mark a turning point in the government's efforts to track down and deport Nazi war criminals living in the United States.

In these cases and others to come, government lawyers are relying on the memories of Jews who watched in horror as their friends and neighbors were beaten and slain by the hundreds in prisons and concentration camps.

About 20 who escaped the persecution and now live in Israel will be brought to the United States to testify in the three hearingu, said Verne Jervis, spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The defendants are Bronius Kaminskas, a 73-year-old Lithuanian who lives alone in a 20-a-week room in Hartford, Conn.; Karlis Detlavs, 65, who retired from his Baltimore factory job after losing a leg to cancer three years ago; and Boleslavs Maikovskis, a 72-year-old retired carpenter in Mineola, N.Y.

Kaminskas and Detlavs have told reporters they are innocent of the charges. Maikovskis has refused to see reporters and has made no comment on the charges.

In legal terms, Detlavs and Maikovskis are charged with entering the United States illegally by lying about their wartime activities. Kaminskas, because of a slight difference in the law at the time he entered the country, is charged with being ineligible for U.S. residence because of war crimes.

Though the charges are based on immigration law, the evidence will focus almost entirely on the atrocities the three allegedly committed. Jervis said the only government witnesses against the three will be the Israeli Jews who claim to have seen the murders and beatings.

The defendants, of course, are entitled to be represented by attorneys and to present testimony from witnesses.

The filing of charges was only a single step in what could be years of court hearings. Any of the Nov. 15 hearings could be postponed at the request of the individual involved.

The INS judges could take several weeks to announce their decisions. The loser, whether it's the defendant or the agency, may appeal to the Board of Immigration Appeals. The defendant, if he loses there, could take the case to a the courts and ultimately to the Supreme Court. The agency, however, cannot appeal the board's decision to the courts.

Meantime, INS investigators are gathering evidence in 77 other cases that could lead to deportation orders or lawsuits to strip naturalized Americans of their citizenship.

The agency has announced plans to launch denaturalization proceedings against four accused war criminals but will not identify them until the suits are filed. This requires Justice Department approval.

Through the 1950s and 1960s, Jervis said, the INS periodically looked into war crimes cases, but no charges were brought and the effort ranked low in priority.

The current effort began three years ago when Leonard F. Chapman took office as INS commissioner and was questioned by the House immigration subcommittee.

"It was clear to him that (the war crimes investigation) was one of the things the subcommittee wanted him to do," Jervis said.

Subcommittee Chairman Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., and member Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., in particular have pushed for a probe.

"The interest of the subcommittee was certainly a factor" in raising the effort to a high priority in the agency, Jervis acknowledged.

Eilberg frequently has complained that the agency has taken much too long to bring the first charges.

One explanation, Jervis said, is that "the size and scope and depth of this is something new for this agency. A worldwide investigation is a new experience for us."

There are only three previous cases in which the INS has attempted to deport immigrants for alleged war crimes.

Deportation charges were initiated against Hermione Braunsteiner Ryan of New York City in 1972. During the process, the West German government initiated extradition proceedings. She was extradited to West Germany in August 1973, and is now on trial there for murder.

A deportation case was brought in 1953 against Andrija Artukovic of Seal Beach, Calif., who is wanted in Yugoslavia on charges of murdering thousands of Serbs, Jews and gypsies. Six years later, a federal court commissioner ruled that he could not be returned to Yugoslavia because he was likely to be the target of political persecution there.

Kennett woman injured in one car accident

KENNETT — A one-car accident early today resulted in minor injuries to a Kennett woman, according to the highway patrol.

Alice Ann Wright, 37, of Kennett, driver of a westbound car, was injured when her car missed a wooden bridge at the intersection of Route U and a township road east of town. The car fell off the bridge and landed on its top in about three feet of water.

She was taken to Dunklin County Memorial Hospital here.

Teasdale announces new farm fuel policy

FLAT RIVER — Joseph P. Teasdale, Democratic candidate for governor, pledged today in a speech at Mineral Area Junior College that as governor he would initiate a farm fuel policy aimed at creating guaranteed fuel reserves for farmers in Missouri.

"We must have a policy, Teasdale said, "that guarantees to our farmers and our consumers that sufficient fuel and fertilizer will be available to produce the food and fiber necessary to maintain our high standard of living here at home and maintain our export markets.

"It is absolutely imperative that an agriculture reserve of our energy supply be set aside and protected from other uses. America's and Missouri's major industry, our food supply, is far too important to be allowed to exist at the whim of a federal energy bureaucrat and at the mercy of some Arab sheik.

"One of my first acts as governor will be to instruct my new director of agriculture to initiate a farm fuel policy. It will be a major responsibility of my new director to develop a plan -- in cooperation with the Federal Energy Administration and with the advice of my Farm Council -- which will insure our farmers the fuel they need."

4 killed, 50 missing in Mississippi River ferry, cargo ship collision

LULING, La. (AP) — Four people were killed and 50 were reported missing today after a cargo ship crashed broadside into a fully loaded Mississippi River ferry, the St. Charles Parish Sheriff's office said.

"The ferry was reported to have a full load of aproximately 20 cars with an unknown number of occupants and aproximately 50 walk-on passengers, although the exact number of persons involved is unknown," said Jim Morrison, a U.S. Cost Guard spokesman.

One reporter on the scene said four bodies had been located. A sister ferry rushed back to the sinking vessel and rescued several persons from about 100 yards out in the swift running water.

The stricken ferry, on a rush-hour run between Destrehan and Luling about 20 miles upriver from New Orleans, was upended in the water and sank in about 15 minutes. The cargo ship went upriver and anchored.

"We saw a cargo ship moving up river, approaching the ferry," said Jerry Mayo, a worker on the rescue ferry. "It blew its horn four or five times.

"The ship hit the ferry broadside, ran completely over it," he said.

Mayo said the cargo ship pushed the ferry upriver and finally turned it over.

The Coast Guard said the accident happened shortly before 6:30 a.m. CDT as the sun was coming up. There was no fog.

Mingo to get $302,000

DENVER— The Mingo Wildlife Refuge near Puxico has been allotted $302,000, as part of the Bicentennial Land Heritage Program, according to U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials.

The program, announced by President Gerald Ford, would provide more than $60.1 million for fish and wildlife refuge support in the Missouri Basin Region, according to Region Director Harvey Willoughby.

Willouoghby said "Although public visitation to the National Wildlife refuge system has quadripled in the past 20 years to 30 million annually, and the system's size has doubled, staffing for the system has not been increased in 10 years, nor has maintenance funding been adequate.

He said "The President's proposal, while providing $31 million nationallv for acquisition of 111,000 acres of habitat for endangered species, additions to existing refuges, and acquisition of existing refuge inholdings also would provide over $60 million for improvements and maintenance in the Missouri Basin alone, over a 10 year period."

Low water cruise comments voiced on river operations

CAIRO, Ill. — Generally favorable comments were given on the Army Corps of Engineers operation of the Mississippi River at a public hearing held here Monday.

In the annual low water cruise of the Mississippi River Commission aboard the Corps' riverboat Mississippi, spokesmen from levee and drainage districts bordering the river from here to Memphis, Tenn., voiced appreciation for the corps' efforts in controlling floods and maintaining the levees.

The Mississippi Commission was established in 1973 to provide a public forum for information on the corps' river operations. Each year, they make a low water cruise during the fall and a high water cruise each spring to hold hearings on the corps' performance.

The commission president, Maj. Gen. F. P. Koisch, said in opening remarks that he thought the commission was doing a good job in satisfying the needs of Mississippi Valley residents, and he hoped the public hearing would indicate ways to do a better job.

Among those addressing the commission, was Harry H. Bach, who represented St. John's Bayou Basin Drainage District.

Bach asked the MRC for a progress report on the drainage program for the St. John's area in Mississippi County. Gen. Koisch replied that the bill authorizing the $300,000 phase one study was before President Gerald R. Ford. The bill will either be signed or vetoed by Oct. 23, the general said.

The proposal for the bayou calls for the local authorities to pay for maintenance of pumping facilities after the federal government builds them, he added.

Another Mississippi County resident, Glenn Ault Jr., Consolidated Drainage District No. 1 president, asked the commission for aid in convincing the U.S. Senate and House of representatives that the proposed St. John project was a flood control measure and not a drainage operation.

Ault explained the difference as local government being required to pay operating and maintenance costs in drainage projects. However, in flood control projects, the federal government pays operating expenses.

The general advised the group to continue requests for flood control designation with their congressman.

Chaffee schools would lose $600,000 if Amendment 2 passes

CHAFFEE— The Chaffee R-2 School District Board of Education went on record Monday night against Constitutional Amendment No. 2 in the Nov. 2 general election, noting that it would mean a loss of $60,000 in state aid to the school district for fiscal year 1978-79 if the amendment suould pass.

The board asked all parents of children in Chaffee schools to vote against the amendment.

Martha Adams and Nelda Crader, grade school teachers and representatives of the Community Teachers Association, presented the Chaffee teachers' philosophy of education for use in the drafting of new policies for the district. Suggestions from the faculty on policy making were given to Betty Montgomery, chairman of the policy committee.

In other business, it was noted that the school quarter closes Oct. 29, with all report cards to be issued Nov. 3.

Supt. Howard Reed, who has been appointed to the Cape Girardeau Vocational School advisory committee, reported that, at present, only junior and senior students will be accepted at the Cape Girardeau Vocational School.

The board was told that the Chaffee Jaycees will sponsor a dance marathon at 8 p.m. Nov. 26 and 27 at the old high school gymnasium. The Jaycees will chaperone the dance and Eddie Martin Sound System will donate the sound system. All proceeds will go to the Chaffee High School senior class.

Permission was granted to Donna Hess, representing the Catholic Youth Council Club to use the old gymnasium every Wednesday night from 6:30 to 9 p.m. In addition St. Ambrose Elementary School has been given permission to use the same facility for practice and several games which have already been scheduled.

Elementary Principal Bill Bradshaw reported on the Kindergarten Inventory of Developmental Skills tests which were given the first day of school to kindergarten students to determine their readiness level.Bradshaw said he will have a full report on the outcome of the testing for parents at a later date.

An expanded summer school program was approved under the Title I program, with some preschool children to be included in next summer's program, Bradshaw added.

Phelps, Rabbitt battle in livelier race than usual

By TERRY JUDD
Missouri Press News

"Out of 60,000 possible persons attending that game I would have to run into him," Rabbitt said with a chuckle.

It probably will not be the last time the two candidates cross the same path as they scurry across Missouri in search of votes.

By all indications the lieutenant governor's race will be a close one. A poll commissioned by Gov. Christopher Bond's campaign in early September puts Lt. Gov. Phelps narrowly behind Rabbitt, even though Bond substantially leads his Democratic rival, Joseph Teasdale.

The poll raises the specter of a Bond-Rabbitt administration, something neither Democrats nor Republicans prefer. If Bond and Rabbitt are elected in November, it would mark the first time since 1944 that Missouri's Governor and Lt. Governor have come from different parties.

In 1940 voters elected Republican Forrest C. Donnell as governor and Democrat Frank Gaines Harris as lieutenant governor.

Phelps is campaigning hard to convince voters that a Bond-Rabbitt or a Teasdale-Phelps administration would be "disastrous" for the state.

"It would be a tragedy," Phelps says. "Obviously the governor needs help from the lieutenant governor. There are enough checks and balances that we don't need a critic in the lieutenant governor's office. That type of lieutenant governor could assume policies of his own."

Even though Rabbitt would rather serve under Teasdale, he is not discouraging speculation about a Bond-Rabbitt administration.

"As lieutenant governor, I hope to have a great deal of influence with the legislative process. And this is something I can help any governor who's elected — either Bond or Teasdale," Rabbitt says.

Rabbitt dismisses the notion he would try to change the governor's policies when the governor left the state.

"No one in his right mind would try and redirect the governor's policies when the governor is absent," Rabbitt says. "On the other hand, if it had the effect of keeping the governor home more, then he might follow his own advice and vacation in Missouri."

But Bond and Phelps stress the need for cooperation between the two highest elected offices in the state. To get the message across they are running under the slogan "Missouri's First Team," even though voters vote separately for governor and lieutenant governor.

Phelps stresses the need for this team to be preserved. "Bond and I have a good working relationship. I'm honored to be involved with the decision-making at the top levels," he says.

Rabbitt believes there are other reasons for the "team" campaign concept.

"I think it's obvious what is happening. Last time Phelps ran 200,000 votes behind Bond," Rabbitt says. "They're trying to bring him on Bond's coattails and Danforth's coattails. But I don't think it's going to work."

Rabbitt believes it is not going to work because what he calls "the lack of accomplishment" in Phelps' office.

"I think what he has done in the last four years is act as an assistant or, as I use the term, an errand-boy for the governor," Rabbitt says. "I think the lieutenant governor should work as a liaison between the legislative and the executive levels of government.

"Phelps, of course, has failed to do that. He has no respect in the State Senate and very little in the House."

As in most other states, Missouri's lieutenant governor serves as the Senate's president. Phelps' energetic use of that position in 1973 brought about a Supreme Court case which limited his duties to regulating floor debate.

That Supreme Court battle was touched off when Democratic senators refused one day to allow Phelps to assume his position on the podium. When Phelps persisted, senators ordered the sergeants-at-arms to physically remove him from the chamber.

Two of them clamped their arms around Phelps and escorted him back to his office. The court suit followed immediately.

Rabbitt contends that with his 15 years of experience in the House he is better equipped to handle the legislature.

Phelps sharply disagrees. He says his 12 years in the General Assembly makes him qualified to deal with the legislature. Phelps points out disagrees. He says his 12 years in the General Assembly makes him qualified to deal with the legislature. Phelps points out his achievements in the lieutenant governor's office.

"I've been creative and innovative in my office. I also have initiated several programs. All Rabbitt is capable of doing is belittling and downgrading the things we want," Phelps says. "If that's the way he looks at it, then we don't need Richard Rabbitt."

Phelps points out his ombudsman program, which helps citizens solve problems with state agencies, as proof of his leadership ability. In addition, Phelps says he is the Missouri Volunteer coordinator, the chairman of the 1976 Governor's Conference on Education and director of LEAP (Loaned Executive Action Program).

Such activities, according to Phelps requires a "full-time" lieutenant governor, even though the job traditionally has been part-time.

Phelps utilizes his "full-time" image in the campaign by frequently introducing himself as "full-time" Phelps. His campaign literature depicts the Missouri State Capitol at night with a lone light shining from his office window.

"I pledged to give up my Kansas City law practice and did," Phelps says. "The lieutenant governorship is my occupation now. As my wife Joanne says, it's not only full-time but also over time."

Rabbitt takes issue with Phelps' definition of full-time. "He tries to give this impression to the people that he hasn't any other business, but he does have another business," Rabbitt says.

"I don't think he's been devoting all his time to the state. Of course the most important thing is what results you get. And I don't think you can really show any accomplishments in the last four years."

Rabbitt points to what he calls Phelps' "other interests." Immediately after he became lieutenant governor, Phelps built a building in Nevada and leased part of it to the Federal government, Rabbitt says.

Rabbitt also charges that Phelps receives a salary from a bank in Columbus, Kan.

Phelps contends his real estate investments are investments and not jobs. He does not see any problem with leasing rooms to the federal government because anyone could have submitted a bid for the federal business.

Phelps also does not see any conflict with his out-of-state investments and membership on a Kansas bank board. He says the investments are proper and do not interfere with his job.

"I disclosed my assets and income from last year. I'd like to see Mr. Rabbitt do the same," Phelps says.

Rabbitt also attacks Phelps's voting record in the House as evidence that Phelps is not full-time. He charges that the lieutenant governor cast tie-breaking votes in the Senate only 20 per cent of the time.

Rabbitt figures there were 10 such opportunities during Phelps' term. Out of that 10 he was absent for five. When he was present, he voted only twice, Rabbitt says.

Phelps charges Rabbitt "with a complete distortion of the facts." He blames his absences on occasions he was acting governor, the 1973 flood-relief coordinator and when he was unconstitutionally barred from being President of the Senate.

"It's unfair to level the charge I wasn't there 50 per cent of the time when I was there 94 per cent," Phelps says.

The barbs each candidate cast at each other are likely to increase as the campaign swings into the final weeks.

"I really don't get along with Richard Rabbitt," Phelps says. "I've always disagreed with the type of things Rabbitt represents. He's the kind of person that puts the politician before the public."

Rabbitt's campaign is relatively small. The only paid staff member is the campaign manager. For this reason, the campaign depends on volunteers.

Rabbitt is touring the state in a van, driven by his nephew, Joe Rabbitt. Rabbitt and his wife are visiting precincts and numerous counties.

Phelps' campaign is more structured with two paid staff members. Phelps' campaign, like that of Gov. Bond's, is assisted by John Deardourff Associates of Washington, D.C.

This campaign organization, which caters to Republican candidates, has run very effective campaigns in Ohio, Michigan and on the national level. This year, Deardourff is advising the Ford campaign as well.

When Phelps cannot use state transportation, he rides around in a 1972 Chevrolet with more than 90,000 miles on the odometer. Like the Rabbitt campaign, his schedule is flexible and hectic.

Both candidates naturally are convinced their efforts will be rewarded by the voters in November.

"I think we're going to win," Phelps says. "We've got a solid record of performance. I can't believe the people will reject that."

Rabbitt is just as optimistic. "I think my campaign is going very well," Rabbitt says. "I feel I'm doing everything possible with the limited resurces I have available to bring my message to the people."

Kirkpatrick, Huffman race promises to break one record

By CHARLES EALY
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — This year's race for Secretary of State between Rep. Mildred Huffman, R-Chesterfield, and incumbent Democrat James Kirkpatrick will not break any records for excitement or controversy, but the outcome of the race is certain to break Missouri political tradition.

If elected, Mrs. Huffman would become the first woman ever to hold statewide office in Missouri. If re-elected, Kirkpatrick would become the longest serving elected state official in history, already having served 12 years.

Despite the lack of issues, Mrs. Huffman has stumped the state attempting to stimulate interest in a traditionally uninteresting race.

The 71-year-old Kirkpatrick, known for his personable campaigning and political popularity, also has pumped his share of hands. "I'm doing as much campaigning as I've ever done," he said.

Neither sex nor age, however, has become an issue in the campaign. Kirkpatrick raises no issues — "I'm just running on my record," he said.

All attempts at controversy are the sole responsibility of Mrs. Huffman, who gave up a secure legislative seat to challenge the politically formidable Kirkpatrick. To date, she has attacked his record on at least four points:

—His efforts to personalize the state manual by changing its color from blue to green (Kirkpatrick's campaign color).

—His failure to support the state's campaign reporting law passed by voters in 1974.

—His failure to modernize office operations.

—His handling of nominating petitions to place independent candidates on the state ballot.

Mrs. Huffman promises to restore blue as the color of the state manual, although she realizes that "the state of Missouri would not rise or fall regardless of the color. His changing the color was just a gimmick to mix political campaigning with official duties," she said.

Kirkpatrick does not worry about the color-of-the-manual scandal. "You can't separate political campaigning from the duties of an office. You campaign every day you're in office by the very fact that you do a good or bad job," he said.

Mrs. Huffman said Kirkpatrick did not fulfill his duties as the state's chief election official because he did not support the campaign finance law.

"He did nothing to improve the law; he did not participate in any suggestions to make a good law. He just said it was bad, and that was that," she said.

Kirkpatrick said, "She doesn't know what she's talking about. I've strongly supported and still support the full and complete disclosure of campaign funds and expenditures ahead of the election by those of us who receive a salary from political office. I attended all the hearings, but I have yet to see Mrs. Huffman at any of them."

Mrs. Huffman pledges to modernize the Secretary of State office and alleges that Kirkpatrick has been inefficient, unorganized and old-fashioned.

"Records are kept on an unmodernized basis, and I've had people tell me they've spent three days looking for the records they needed from the office. I would set up a more refined system of record-keeping by using computers, especially for taxing and licensing corporations," she said.

Kirkpatrick said his office is already using computers. "We're using computers for information from the campaign practices act. And we're using computers in the corporation department," he said.

Kirkpatrick said no one has ever spent three days looking for records. "We average about 375 inquiries per day in the corporation department, and we're able to give people the information they need within three minutes over the telephone."

Mrs. Huffman also criticizes Kirkpatrick's handling of nominating petitions for independent candidates. "It's quite obvious that in the petition department he is not serving the public," she said.

"The McCarthy supporters brought in petitions, and he said they were invalid. So they had to do the work he should have done and prove that the petitions really were valid. That is not serving the public, and it's an indication of what has been going on all the way through his administration," she said.

Kirkpatrick said the petition process is not a problem of his office but a problem of the legislature, of which Mrs. Huffman is a member. "The legislature is responsible for election laws, and I was just following the law.

"We sent the McCarthy petitions to local election subdivisions, and they checked over 700,000 names on petitions this year. They checked the McCarthy petitions against the records, but unfortunately the petitions weren't checked close enough," he said.

Kirkpatrick added that the McCarthy attorney, Robert Sears, commended his office for working overtime, rechecking the names on the petitions, and eventually ruling that the petitions were valid.

3 nations sign protection plan

WASHINGTON — The United States, Mexico and Canada officially have joined forces to fight the harmful plant pests they now share and to guard against new ones, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has announced.

Agricultural representatives from the three countries signed the North American Plant Protection Agreement -- a pact which will unify efforts to solve "continental" pest problems.

Signing the agreement for the United States was Dr. Francis J. Mulhern, administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS). Representing Mexico was Ing. Benjamin Ortega Cantero, director general de Sanidad Vegetal, Secretaria de Agricultura y Ganaderia. Dr. Donald S. MacLachlen, director of the Canadian Department of Agriculture's Plant Protection Division, signed for Canada.

"The new agreement allows us to deal more effectively with destructive pests of mutal concern to the North American community," said Dr. Mulhern. "We can now approach plant protection on a continental basis, rather than country-by-country."

The agreement -- in the works since 1973 -- formalizes working relationships among Mexican, American and Canadian plant protection agencies. It also gives legal authority to programs, standards and regulations adopted for pest control throughout North America.

The new agreement enables signing countries to merge their anti-pest programs as the need arises. It also lends uniformity to regulations governing such procedures as international garbage disposal and importation of used farm equipment. Currently, both are major channels for pests "hitchhiking" into, and within, North America.

Signing of the agreement is the highlight of the 1976 Mexico-United states - Canada Plant Protection Work Conference held Oct. 12-16 in Yosemite National Park, Calif.

Agricultural representatives from the three nations have met annually since 1952 to informally exchange information on new problems, laws and techniques in North American pest control.

The 50 conferees this year include agricultural officials from the national governments of Canada, Mexico and Guatamala, the U.S. federal government and state governments in California, Texas and New Mexico.

Burlison testifies against the proposal to close air force base

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark. — At a public environmental impact hearing which opened Monday morning at the Blytheville Air Force Base, Missouri 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Cape Girardeau, testified against a proposal to close or cut back base operations.

Burlison, who told Air Force officials he was speaking for the nearly 100 residents of Dunklin and Pemiscot counties employed at the base, cited the Air Force's own statistics to show the base was less costly to operate than two other bases slated for closure.

The Air Force has stated that it must close two of the four single- mission Strategic Air Command bases now in existence in the United States. The prime candidates for closure are Kinchloe Air Force Base at Sault Sainte Marie, Mich., and Loring Air Force Base at Limestone, Maine.

Blytheville Air Force Base was presented by the Air Force as an alternative prospect to the closure of either base.

The congressman stated that climatic conditions gave the base a cost- of- operation advantage over the other two bases. Burlison also said, again citing Air Force statistics, that the number of training missions lost to Blytheville, on a proportional basis, was less than one - eighth the number lost at Loring and one-tenth the number lost at Kinchloe.

The congressman also cited economic statistics provided by the Air Force to show the need to retain the base. He said about 3,500 military and civilian wage-earners are employed at the base, and that the total base payroll of $32 million per year represents 11.5 per cent of the total personal income in the area of the base's influence.

Also on hand to testify against the closing of the base were a number of civic and political leaders from the Bootheel and northeast Arkansas.

Air Force officials have indicated that the final decision on the fate of the base will be made sometime within the next 12 to 18 months.

Phelps, Rabbitt battle in livelier race than usual

By TERRY JUDD
Missouri Press News

"Out of 60,000 possible persons attending that game I would have to run into him," Rabbitt said with a chuckle.

It probably will not be the last time the two candidates cross the same path as they scurry across Missouri in search of votes.

By all indications the lieutenant governor's race will be a close one. A poll commissioned by Gov. Christopher Bond's campaign in early September puts Lt. Gov. Phelps narrowly behind Rabbitt, even though Bond substantially leads his Democratic rival, Joseph Teasdale.

The poll raises the specter of a Bond-Rabbitt administration, something neither Democrats nor Republicans prefer. If Bond and Rabbitt are elected in November, it would mark the first time since 1944 that Missouri's Governor and Lt. Governor have come from different parties.

In 1940 voters elected Republican Forrest C. Donnell as governor and Democrat Frank Gaines Harris as lieutenant governor.

Phelps is campaigning hard to convince voters that a Bond-Rabbitt or a Teasdale-Phelps administration would be "disastrous" for the state.

"It would be a tragedy," Phelps says. "Obviously the governor needs help from the lieutenant governor. There are enough checks and balances that we don't need a critic in the lieutenant governor's office. That type of lieutenant governor could assume policies of his own."

Even though Rabbitt would rather serve under Teasdale, he is not discouraging speculation about a Bond-Rabbitt administration.

"As lieutenant governor, I hope to have a great deal of influence with the legislative process. And this is something I can help any governor who's elected — either Bond or Teasdale," Rabbitt says.

Rabbitt dismisses the notion he would try to change the governor's policies when the governor left the state.

"No one in his right mind would try and redirect the governor's policies when the governor is absent," Rabbitt says. "On the other hand, if it had the effect of keeping the governor home more, then he might follow his own advice and vacation in Missouri."

But Bond and Phelps stress the need for cooperation between the two highest elected offices in the state. To get the message across they are running under the slogan "Missouri's First Team," even though voters vote separately for governor and lieutenant governor.

Phelps stresses the need for this team to be preserved. "Bond and I have a good working relationship. I'm honored to be involved with the decision-making at the top levels," he says.

Rabbitt believes there are other reasons for the "team" campaign concept.

"I think it's obvious what is happening. Last time Phelps ran 200,000 votes behind Bond," Rabbitt says. "They're trying to bring him on Bond's coattails and Danforth's coattails. But I don't think it's going to work."

Rabbitt believes it is not going to work because what he calls "the lack of accomplishment" in Phelps' office.

"I think what he has done in the last four years is act as an assistant or, as I use the term, an errand-boy for the governor," Rabbitt says. "I think the lieutenant governor should work as a liaison between the legislative and the executive levels of government.

"Phelps, of course, has failed to do that. He has no respect in the State Senate and very little in the House."

As in most other states, Missouri's lieutenant governor serves as the Senate's president. Phelps' energetic use of that position in 1973 brought about a Supreme Court case which limited his duties to regulating floor debate.

That Supreme Court battle was touched off when Democratic senators refused one day to allow Phelps to assume his position on the podium. When Phelps persisted, senators ordered the sergeants-at-arms to physically remove him from the chamber.

Two of them clamped their arms around Phelps and escorted him back to his office. The court suit followed immediately.

Rabbitt contends that with his 15 years of experience in the House he is better equipped to handle the legislature.

Phelps sharply disagrees. He says his 12 years in the General Assembly makes him qualified to deal with the legislature. Phelps points out disagrees. He says his 12 years in the General Assembly makes him qualified to deal with the legislature. Phelps points out his achievements in the lieutenant governor's office.

"I've been creative and innovative in my office. I also have initiated several programs. All Rabbitt is capable of doing is belittling and downgrading the things we want," Phelps says. "If that's the way he looks at it, then we don't need Richard Rabbitt."

Phelps points out his ombudsman program, which helps citizens solve problems with state agencies, as proof of his leadership ability. In addition, Phelps says he is the Missouri Volunteer coordinator, the chairman of the 1976 Governor's Conference on Education and director of LEAP (Loaned Executive Action Program).

Such activities, according to Phelps requires a "full-time" lieutenant governor, even though the job traditionally has been part-time.

Phelps utilizes his "full-time" image in the campaign by frequently introducing himself as "full-time" Phelps. His campaign literature depicts the Missouri State Capitol at night with a lone light shining from his office window.

"I pledged to give up my Kansas City law practice and did," Phelps says. "The lieutenant governorship is my occupation now. As my wife Joanne says, it's not only full-time but also over time."

Rabbitt takes issue with Phelps' definition of full-time. "He tries to give this impression to the people that he hasn't any other business, but he does have another business," Rabbitt says.

"I don't think he's been devoting all his time to the state. Of course the most important thing is what results you get. And I don't think you can really show any accomplishments in the last four years."

Rabbitt points to what he calls Phelps' "other interests." Immediately after he became lieutenant governor, Phelps built a building in Nevada and leased part of it to the Federal government, Rabbitt says.

Rabbitt also charges that Phelps receives a salary from a bank in Columbus, Kan.

Phelps contends his real estate investments are investments and not jobs. He does not see any problem with leasing rooms to the federal government because anyone could have submitted a bid for the federal business.

Phelps also does not see any conflict with his out-of-state investments and membership on a Kansas bank board. He says the investments are proper and do not interfere with his job.

"I disclosed my assets and income from last year. I'd like to see Mr. Rabbitt do the same," Phelps says.

Rabbitt also attacks Phelps's voting record in the House as evidence that Phelps is not full-time. He charges that the lieutenant governor cast tie-breaking votes in the Senate only 20 per cent of the time.

Rabbitt figures there were 10 such opportunities during Phelps' term. Out of that 10 he was absent for five. When he was present, he voted only twice, Rabbitt says.

Phelps charges Rabbitt "with a complete distortion of the facts." He blames his absences on occasions he was acting governor, the 1973 flood-relief coordinator and when he was unconstitutionally barred from being President of the Senate.

"It's unfair to level the charge I wasn't there 50 per cent of the time when I was there 94 per cent," Phelps says.

The barbs each candidate cast at each other are likely to increase as the campaign swings into the final weeks.

"I really don't get along with Richard Rabbitt," Phelps says. "I've always disagreed with the type of things Rabbitt represents. He's the kind of person that puts the politician before the public."

Rabbitt's campaign is relatively small. The only paid staff member is the campaign manager. For this reason, the campaign depends on volunteers.

Rabbitt is touring the state in a van, driven by his nephew, Joe Rabbitt. Rabbitt and his wife are visiting precincts and numerous counties.

Phelps' campaign is more structured with two paid staff members. Phelps' campaign, like that of Gov. Bond's, is assisted by John Deardourff Associates of Washington, D.C.

This campaign organization, which caters to Republican candidates, has run very effective campaigns in Ohio, Michigan and on the national level. This year, Deardourff is advising the Ford campaign as well.

When Phelps cannot use state transportation, he rides around in a 1972 Chevrolet with more than 90,000 miles on the odometer. Like the Rabbitt campaign, his schedule is flexible and hectic.

Both candidates naturally are convinced their efforts will be rewarded by the voters in November.

"I think we're going to win," Phelps says. "We've got a solid record of performance. I can't believe the people will reject that."

Rabbitt is just as optimistic. "I think my campaign is going very well," Rabbitt says. "I feel I'm doing everything possible with the limited resurces I have available to bring my message to the people."

Kirkpatrick, Huffman race promises to break one record

By CHARLES EALY
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — This year's race for Secretary of State between Rep. Mildred Huffman, R-Chesterfield, and incumbent Democrat James Kirkpatrick will not break any records for excitement or controversy, but the outcome of the race is certain to break Missouri political tradition.

If elected, Mrs. Huffman would become the first woman ever to hold statewide office in Missouri. If re-elected, Kirkpatrick would become the longest serving elected state official in history, already having served 12 years.

Despite the lack of issues, Mrs. Huffman has stumped the state attempting to stimulate interest in a traditionally uninteresting race.

The 71-year-old Kirkpatrick, known for his personable campaigning and political popularity, also has pumped his share of hands. "I'm doing as much campaigning as I've ever done," he said.

Neither sex nor age, however, has become an issue in the campaign. Kirkpatrick raises no issues — "I'm just running on my record," he said.

All attempts at controversy are the sole responsibility of Mrs. Huffman, who gave up a secure legislative seat to challenge the politically formidable Kirkpatrick. To date, she has attacked his record on at least four points:

—His efforts to personalize the state manual by changing its color from blue to green (Kirkpatrick's campaign color).

—His failure to support the state's campaign reporting law passed by voters in 1974.

—His failure to modernize office operations.

—His handling of nominating petitions to place independent candidates on the state ballot.

Mrs. Huffman promises to restore blue as the color of the state manual, although she realizes that "the state of Missouri would not rise or fall regardless of the color. His changing the color was just a gimmick to mix political campaigning with official duties," she said.

Kirkpatrick does not worry about the color-of-the-manual scandal. "You can't separate political campaigning from the duties of an office. You campaign every day you're in office by the very fact that you do a good or bad job," he said.

Mrs. Huffman said Kirkpatrick did not fulfill his duties as the state's chief election official because he did not support the campaign finance law.

"He did nothing to improve the law; he did not participate in any suggestions to make a good law. He just said it was bad, and that was that," she said.

Kirkpatrick said, "She doesn't know what she's talking about. I've strongly supported and still support the full and complete disclosure of campaign funds and expenditures ahead of the election by those of us who receive a salary from political office. I attended all the hearings, but I have yet to see Mrs. Huffman at any of them."

Mrs. Huffman pledges to modernize the Secretary of State office and alleges that Kirkpatrick has been inefficient, unorganized and old-fashioned.

"Records are kept on an unmodernized basis, and I've had people tell me they've spent three days looking for the records they needed from the office. I would set up a more refined system of record-keeping by using computers, especially for taxing and licensing corporations," she said.

Kirkpatrick said his office is already using computers. "We're using computers for information from the campaign practices act. And we're using computers in the corporation department," he said.

Kirkpatrick said no one has ever spent three days looking for records. "We average about 375 inquiries per day in the corporation department, and we're able to give people the information they need within three minutes over the telephone."

Mrs. Huffman also criticizes Kirkpatrick's handling of nominating petitions for independent candidates. "It's quite obvious that in the petition department he is not serving the public," she said.

"The McCarthy supporters brought in petitions, and he said they were invalid. So they had to do the work he should have done and prove that the petitions really were valid. That is not serving the public, and it's an indication of what has been going on all the way through his administration," she said.

Kirkpatrick said the petition process is not a problem of his office but a problem of the legislature, of which Mrs. Huffman is a member. "The legislature is responsible for election laws, and I was just following the law.

"We sent the McCarthy petitions to local election subdivisions, and they checked over 700,000 names on petitions this year. They checked the McCarthy petitions against the records, but unfortunately the petitions weren't checked close enough," he said.

Kirkpatrick added that the McCarthy attorney, Robert Sears, commended his office for working overtime, rechecking the names on the petitions, and eventually ruling that the petitions were valid.

State groups join in opposing Proposition 1

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A state labor group and a state business group have joined forces in opposing a proposition on the Nov. 2 election ballot.

The State Chamber of Commerce and the State Labor Council AFL-CIO issued a joint statement today, contending that proposition one "is one of the most devious issues to appear in recent years."

The proposal, which is being submitted to voters through an initiative petition, would prohibit utilities from charging through their rates the finance charges on large power plant projects.

Glenn E. Scott, executive vice president of the Missouri Chamber of Commerce, and Vincent J. VanCamp, president of the Missouri State Labor Council AFL-CIO, said that utilities include in their rate bases the "carrying costs" of borrowed money being used in construction of new facilities.

91,746 doses of swine flu vaccine given

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Officials of the swine flu immunization program in Missouri report 91,746 doses of vaccine were administered in the state during the first two weeks of the program.

More than two thirds of the doses, 66,882, were of the bivalent type for elderly and high-risk persons, and the remaining 24,864 doses were of the monovalent type for the general population.

Health officials emphasized that scientific evidence continues to to support the safety and effectiveness of the swine flu vaccine.

Jim Donoho, administrator of the program, said that 133 persons were inoculated in two clinics in state offices here from Oct. 4-12, and a later check showed minimal reactions such as headache, nausea and redness of the arm. Three persons felt ill enough to miss work for part or all of one day.

State groups join in opposing Proposition 1

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A state labor group and a state business group have joined forces in opposing a proposition on the Nov. 2 election ballot.

The State Chamber of Commerce and the State Labor Council AFL-CIO issued a joint statement today, contending that proposition one "is one of the most devious issues to appear in recent years."

The proposal, which is being submitted to voters through an initiative petition, would prohibit utilities from charging through their rates the finance charges on large power plant projects.

Glenn E. Scott, executive vice president of the Missouri Chamber of Commerce, and Vincent J. VanCamp, president of the Missouri State Labor Council AFL-CIO, said that utilities include in their rate bases the "carrying costs" of borrowed money being used in construction of new facilities.

91,746 doses of swine flu vaccine given

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Officials of the swine flu immunization program in Missouri report 91,746 doses of vaccine were administered in the state during the first two weeks of the program.

More than two thirds of the doses, 66,882, were of the bivalent type for elderly and high-risk persons, and the remaining 24,864 doses were of the monovalent type for the general population.

Health officials emphasized that scientific evidence continues to to support the safety and effectiveness of the swine flu vaccine.

Jim Donoho, administrator of the program, said that 133 persons were inoculated in two clinics in state offices here from Oct. 4-12, and a later check showed minimal reactions such as headache, nausea and redness of the arm. Three persons felt ill enough to miss work for part or all of one day.

Armed forces

HAHN, Germany — Sgt. Julius R. Kershaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Kershaw of Portageville, Mo., Route One, is taking part in Crested Cap '76--a North Atlantic Treaty Organization exercise in Germany.

Sgt. Kershaw is a sheet metal specialist at Holloman AFB, N.M., with the dual-based 49th Tactical Fighter Wing whose units and support personnel deploy to the European continent each year for month-long maneuvers.

F-4 Phantom fighter-bomber aircrews from the 49th are flying simulated combat missions from Hahn Air Base in support of allied forces taking part in the exercise.

The sergeant is a 1973 graduate of Portageville High School.

HAHN, Germany — Staff Sgt. Kenneth D. Ross, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd L. Ross of Portageville, Mo., Route Two, is taking part in Crested Cap '76--a North Atlantic Treaty Organization exercise in Germany.

Sgt. Ross is a weapons maintenance technician at Holloman AFB, N.M., with the dual-based 49th Tactical Fighter Wing whose units and support personnel deploy to the European continent each year for month-long maneuvers.

State funds, planning needed in pre-schools

By CHRIS PATTERSON
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — A report prepared for the Governor's Conference on Education recommends increased statewide planning and funding of education and services related to pre-school children and their parents.

The "Early Childhood and Parent Education" recommendations will be considered by the 700-member governor's conference when it convenes Dec. 2 in Columbia.

The conference, established by Gov. Christopher S. Bond, is charged with recommending goals for education in Missouri which will serve as a basis of direction for public education during the next quarter century.

The conference, chaired by Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps, will consider recommendations in four other areas of concentration — educational finance, governance, accountability and vocational education.

In the area of early childhood and parent education, the steering committee's recommendations concentrate on programs educating both the pre-school child and his parent.

The report calls for the establishment and implementation of a statewide plan for services related to the development and learning of children from birth to age six.

This plan would be developed through the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, and would include all agencies having responsibility for services to young children. It would be used to avoid duplication and fragmentation of services and to provide for greater equalization of services throughout the state, the report says.

The state education department would be responsible for coordinating these agencies, but would not be responsible for creating new services or agencies.

The report also suggests that the state department of education begin a statewide media campaign intended to create public awareness and educate parents on the importance of early childhood learning.

The School Foundation Formula should be revised to fund parent and child education programs and services, and make them available to families with children from birth to age five, the report says. This also would include early childhood special education programs.

"It should be noted that assisting parents in fostering the child's development and learning in the home can be done for little cost as compared to programs in an institutional setting," the report says. "Parent and child early education can also prevent far more costly remediation later."

Both elementary and secondary schools should be required to offer courses in family life education, the report recommends.

In addition, junior and senior high schools should offer courses in prenatal and child growth and development. All in-school expectant parents should be required to take the courses, the report recommends.

The report pointed out that one of every 10 17-year-old girls is a mother. These teenage parents need immediate guidance in becoming effective parents, the report says.

But all students can benefit from training of this sort, the report states.

"Parent education can prepare teenagers to anticipate the requirements and demands of child rearing and, it is hoped, help to stem the incidents of infanticide and child abuse," the report says.

The report also recommended that schools provide adult education in prenatal development, child care and parenting skills as a community service.

In addition, teachers should be provided with pre-service and in-service training in these areas, and in working effectively with parents concerning these areas.

Finally, the report says the state should provide aid for full-day kindergarten programs on the same basis that state aid is provided for other regular programs.

Presented medal

Staff Sgt. Edward D. Qualls is presented the U.S. Air Force Commendation Medal at Barksdale Air Force Base near Alexandria, La., by Col. Frank H. McArdle, chief- of-staff, 8th Air Force.

Qualls receives commendation medal

ALEXANDRIA, La. — Meritorious service at Mildenhall Royal Air Force Station, England, has earned the U.S. Air Force Commendation Medal for Staff Sgt. Edward D. Qualls, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Benton G. Bowman of Dexter, Mo., Route Three.

Sgt. Qualls, an administrative supervisor, was presented the medal at Barksdale Air Force Base, where he now serves with a unit of the Strategic Air Command.

The sergeant is a 1969 graduate of Dexter High School and holds an associate's degree from the University of Maryland European Division at Mildenhall.

His wife Doris is the daughter of Mrs. Lillie B. Bess of advance, Mo., Route One.

Common Cause seeking candidates pledges for financing disclosures

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Common Cause in Missouri, the selfstyled citizens lobby, is trying to elicit from the two major candidates for governor pledges that they will take administrative action for financing disclosure by administration officials and disclosure of lobbyist contacts with agency heads.

In a statement, Common Cause direcgtor Ted Stein said GOP Gov. Christopher S. Bond and Democratic challenger Joseph P. Teasdale are being asked whether they would issue executive orders to accomplish those two things "to help fill the void left by the General Assembly's inaction."

Both Bond and Teasdale have already pledged to issue an executive order requiring financial disclosure by high-ranking appointed officials in their administrations, Stein said. He said the candidates' responses to the question of lobbying contact disclosure and four other issues will be released prior to the Nov. 2 election.

The candidates are also being asked what they will do to gain ratification of the equal rights amendment, resolve problems with the current campaign financing law, secure passage of a law requiring all state programs to justify their existence periodically or be abolished and streamline the state legislature's committee system.

'Salutations; Bald Soprano' to be presented at SeMo U

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Examples of perhaps the theater's most unique form of comedy will be presented Saturday and Sunday in the Lab Theatre at Southeast Missouri State University. They are "Salutations" and "The Bald Soprano", two short Eugene Ionesco comedies considered works of the "theater of the absurd."

The one-act plays will begin at 7:30 each night. The Lab Theatre is situated in Room 104 of the Grauel Building, located on the corner of Normal and Pacific.

According to the play's director, Kay Robinson of the speech communication and theater department, theater of the absurd works reflect the philosophy that mankind's existence is absurd and without much meaning. While that view of life may not be too uplifting to most people, audiences may have to concede that it holds some truth after viewing Ionesco's plays.

Things people say to other often are sillier than they would want to admit, and many conversations do have a way of drifting off into nowhere in a nonsensical way. These and other points are humorously brought home in Ionesco's works. Both one- acts were written in the early 1950's.

Principal players in "Salutations" include junior Denny Glenn of Ellisville, senior John Logan of Cape Girardeau and graduate Mike Payne of 317 Benton St., Sikeston. Major parts in "The Bald Soprano" are held by freshman Mark Amsden of Hillsobor, freshman Laura McGhee of Dexter, sophomore Mark Rowley of St. Louis, junior Debbie Ford of Cedar Hill, sophomore Denise French of Perryville and sophomore Doug Smith of St. Ann.

Student Randy Winder, a freshman from Cape Girardeau, is assistant director. Lighting designers for the one- acts are senior Mike Hensley of Caruthersville and freshman Dan Irvine of Cape Girardeau.

This is the fourth year of operation for Southeast Missouri State's Lab Theatre. The converted classroom was created as a "stretching place," according to Miss Robinson, so students and faculty might try out different plays and staging techniques apart from the University Theatre's major productions.

Legislators needed to update workmen's compensation

JEFFERSON CITY — After spending almost one year and $7,500 to study needed revisions in Missouri's workmen's compensation laws, 12 recommendations made to the General Assembly by the state committee on Workmen's Compensation still remain ideas.

Of seven bills introduced in the last session of the legislature, only one, increasing the minimum funeral expense compensation from $800 to $1,200, became law.

The committee's work, which includes state-wide hearings for testimony on the problems with workmen's compensation, is continuing. An updated report will be completed by Dec. 1.

In his own effort to initiate changes in workmen's compensation laws, Gov. Christopher Bond has appointed an ad hoc committee to make recommendations to him.

The committee, led by George E. Taff, a Labor and Industrial Relations Commissioner, has been working since June and also will have its report to Bond by Dec. 1.

Richard Rousselot, director of the Division of Workmen's Compensation, says it is the responsibility of the legislators on the committee to promote the legislation.

One committee member, Judith O'Connor, D-St. Louis, says the short session of the election year was partly to blame for so little action being taken on the committee's recommendations.

"I spent a lot of my own time on the hearings," she says, "and I feel like I'd like to get more accomplished."

Members of the workmen's compensation division agree. According to Rousselot, a report of federal guidelines will soon be released which give states only two years to come into compliance with federal standards.

If they fail to comply, Rousselot says, the federal government could come in and take over the workmen's compensation program.

Three of the original recommendations cover the areas most in need of change, Rousselot says.

One of the proposals would set the maximum benefit for temporary total disability at two-thirds of the average weekly industrial wage. This would represent about a 12 per cent increase in the present maximum compensation of $95 per week.

Rousselot says several other states now use this formula for determining the rate of compensation.

The committee also proposed changes in two areas that would eliminate some employers exemptions from carrying workmen's compensation.

These would take off the limitations on the number of employes, 7, and the amount of payroll, $2,500 per year, which now exempt employers from the requirement to carry coverage.

Under the changes, any employer, no matter how few persons he employs, would have to provide them with coverage if his annual payroll is more than $1,000.

The third important recommendation for updating Missouri's laws deals with rehabilitation of disabled workers.

Committee member Grover Field, treasurer of the Missouri State Labor Council, says this is the most important area of workmen's compensation. He says the emphasis by the federal government is now on vocational, as well as physical rehabilitation.

Field says the emphasis should be toward "giving a person the confidence that they can do a job even though they've been hurt and laid off."

Missouri law now provides for physical rehabilitation, but offers nothing in the area of vocational rehabilitation.

Another federal recommendation Field stresses is the development of a method to speed claim settlements.

Because of unclear definitions on what exactly constitutes a "work related" injury, Field says there is often a long delay between the time a claim is filed and the time the injured worker is paid.

O'Connor says the most frequently heard complaints in the committee's hearings since January have been about the promptness of claim settlements.

"People feel they are put off," O'Connor says. "They have to wait until they are desperate, and consequently they settle for less than they feel they are entitled to."

One solution the committee studied was the California system of workmen's compensation.

In California, both the worker and the employer pay into a fund, and when the worker is injured, he gets paid immediately following his claim. The decision on whether his injury was "work related" does not effect the fact that he gets paid.

Another recommendation was made to add two administrative law judges and one legal advisor to the staff of the Division of Workmen's Compensation.

Rousselot says this would ease the work load on the present staff at a cost of about $50,000 per year. He says the division's funds are in good shape and could easily accommodate the added staff.

The Division of Workmen's Compensation operates on funds raised by a three per cent tax on workmen's compensation insurance policies.

Also recommended was a measure which would require employers to give notice of the reason for termination of disability payments within seven days after termination.

Under present law, no notice is required.

American two dollar bills are as old as the nation. They were first authorized by the Continental Congress in June 1776 as "bills of credit for the defense of America." Some 49,000 two dollars bills were circulated, and ran into trouble. Inflation so plagued the colonies during the Revolutionary War that nobody wanted paper money of any denomination, and "not worth a Continental" became a catchphrase for paper money issued by the Continental Congress, The World Almanac notes.

Cultural series to be given at SeMo State

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The director of the Center for Middle Eastern Studies at the University of Chicago will give the next presentation in the cultural programs series at Southeast Missouri State University.

Dr. Marvin Zonis, who lived for more than three years in the Middle East, will discuss that part of the world at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Little Theatre at Kent Library.

The program is open to faculty members and students of Southeast Missouri State and to members of the Cape Girardeau Community Concert Association. Members of similar associations in communities which have reciprocal agreements with the Cape group may also attend.

There are no reserved seats and no individual tickets will be sold.

Zonis is chairman of the Joint Committee on the Middle East of the American Council of Learned Societies and the Social Science Research Council, and is a past president of the American Institute of Iranian Studies.

Also an associate professor of behavioral and social sciences at Chicago, Zonis has degrees from Yale University, Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He is author of "The Political Elite of Iran", "High Education and Social Change in the Middle East" and numerous other monographs and articles on the Middle East, psychology and politics.

Prison site audit begins

By Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Auditor George Lehr's investigation of the state's handling of land intended for a medium-security prison in the Kansas City area has begun, and Lehr said he hopes to finish it before the general election.

The proposed prison site near Grandview was abandoned under orders of Gov. Christopher Bond when the public reacted negatively to it. A trust account of $100,000 intended to pay for expenses and to be applied to the purchase of the property may not be recovered entirely by the state.

Lehr has hired a private lawyer, Jim Shoemake of St. Louis, to help him in the investigation. Lehr said he plans to invite about 16 people to discuss numerous questions about procedures in attempting to purchase the land.

Lehr says the investigation will be conducted privately unless one of the 16 people refuses to talk voluntarily. In that case, Lehr will subpoena that witness and the discussion will be public.

Lehr said he hopes the investigation will be completed by Oct. 25. He plans to release the results at that time, possibly including some transcripts of the testimony.

Lehr told reporters he will make every effort to keep the inquiry nonpartisan since the election is so close at hand. He says he has no idea whether the matter will damage Bond's re-election campaign.

Shoemake has contributed money to Bond's opponent, Joseph Teasdale, and also supported Ed Dowd, Bond's opponent in 1972. Although his St. Louis law firm does employ Republicans, Shoemake acknowledged that it is prominent in Democratic politics, since James Symington's brother is one of the major partners.

Commission reaffirms view on blind trusts

The Missouri Elections Commission has reaffirmed its earlier position on blind trusts and will not require disclosure of any holdings within such a trust this election year.

That comes as a major disappointment to Teasdale, who long has criticized Bond for keeping most of his personal wealth in such a trust.

The commission did advance a rule it already had adopted, requiring a statement from any candidate with a blind trust to reveal what originally was placed in it, any additions made to it and whether the candidate knows what is in it now.

Bond disclosed his trust's original holdings when he ran for governor in 1972.

Presented medal

Staff Sgt. Edward D. Qualls is presented the U.S. Air Force Commendation Medal at Barksdale Air Force Base near Alexandria, La., by Col. Frank H. McArdle, chief- of-staff, 8th Air Force.

Qualls receives commendation medal

ALEXANDRIA, La. — Meritorious service at Mildenhall Royal Air Force Station, England, has earned the U.S. Air Force Commendation Medal for Staff Sgt. Edward D. Qualls, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Benton G. Bowman of Dexter, Mo., Route Three.

Sgt. Qualls, an administrative supervisor, was presented the medal at Barksdale Air Force Base, where he now serves with a unit of the Strategic Air Command.

The sergeant is a 1969 graduate of Dexter High School and holds an associate's degree from the University of Maryland European Division at Mildenhall.

His wife Doris is the daughter of Mrs. Lillie B. Bess of advance, Mo., Route One.

Common Cause seeking candidates pledges for financing disclosures

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Common Cause in Missouri, the selfstyled citizens lobby, is trying to elicit from the two major candidates for governor pledges that they will take administrative action for financing disclosure by administration officials and disclosure of lobbyist contacts with agency heads.

In a statement, Common Cause direcgtor Ted Stein said GOP Gov. Christopher S. Bond and Democratic challenger Joseph P. Teasdale are being asked whether they would issue executive orders to accomplish those two things "to help fill the void left by the General Assembly's inaction."

Both Bond and Teasdale have already pledged to issue an executive order requiring financial disclosure by high-ranking appointed officials in their administrations, Stein said. He said the candidates' responses to the question of lobbying contact disclosure and four other issues will be released prior to the Nov. 2 election.

The candidates are also being asked what they will do to gain ratification of the equal rights amendment, resolve problems with the current campaign financing law, secure passage of a law requiring all state programs to justify their existence periodically or be abolished and streamline the state legislature's committee system.

'Salutations; Bald Soprano' to be presented at SeMo U

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Examples of perhaps the theater's most unique form of comedy will be presented Saturday and Sunday in the Lab Theatre at Southeast Missouri State University. They are "Salutations" and "The Bald Soprano", two short Eugene Ionesco comedies considered works of the "theater of the absurd."

The one-act plays will begin at 7:30 each night. The Lab Theatre is situated in Room 104 of the Grauel Building, located on the corner of Normal and Pacific.

According to the play's director, Kay Robinson of the speech communication and theater department, theater of the absurd works reflect the philosophy that mankind's existence is absurd and without much meaning. While that view of life may not be too uplifting to most people, audiences may have to concede that it holds some truth after viewing Ionesco's plays.

Things people say to other often are sillier than they would want to admit, and many conversations do have a way of drifting off into nowhere in a nonsensical way. These and other points are humorously brought home in Ionesco's works. Both one- acts were written in the early 1950's.

Principal players in "Salutations" include junior Denny Glenn of Ellisville, senior John Logan of Cape Girardeau and graduate Mike Payne of 317 Benton St., Sikeston. Major parts in "The Bald Soprano" are held by freshman Mark Amsden of Hillsobor, freshman Laura McGhee of Dexter, sophomore Mark Rowley of St. Louis, junior Debbie Ford of Cedar Hill, sophomore Denise French of Perryville and sophomore Doug Smith of St. Ann.

Student Randy Winder, a freshman from Cape Girardeau, is assistant director. Lighting designers for the one- acts are senior Mike Hensley of Caruthersville and freshman Dan Irvine of Cape Girardeau.

This is the fourth year of operation for Southeast Missouri State's Lab Theatre. The converted classroom was created as a "stretching place," according to Miss Robinson, so students and faculty might try out different plays and staging techniques apart from the University Theatre's major productions.

Legislators needed to update workmen's compensation

JEFFERSON CITY — After spending almost one year and $7,500 to study needed revisions in Missouri's workmen's compensation laws, 12 recommendations made to the General Assembly by the state committee on Workmen's Compensation still remain ideas.

Of seven bills introduced in the last session of the legislature, only one, increasing the minimum funeral expense compensation from $800 to $1,200, became law.

The committee's work, which includes state-wide hearings for testimony on the problems with workmen's compensation, is continuing. An updated report will be completed by Dec. 1.

In his own effort to initiate changes in workmen's compensation laws, Gov. Christopher Bond has appointed an ad hoc committee to make recommendations to him.

The committee, led by George E. Taff, a Labor and Industrial Relations Commissioner, has been working since June and also will have its report to Bond by Dec. 1.

Richard Rousselot, director of the Division of Workmen's Compensation, says it is the responsibility of the legislators on the committee to promote the legislation.

One committee member, Judith O'Connor, D-St. Louis, says the short session of the election year was partly to blame for so little action being taken on the committee's recommendations.

"I spent a lot of my own time on the hearings," she says, "and I feel like I'd like to get more accomplished."

Members of the workmen's compensation division agree. According to Rousselot, a report of federal guidelines will soon be released which give states only two years to come into compliance with federal standards.

If they fail to comply, Rousselot says, the federal government could come in and take over the workmen's compensation program.

Three of the original recommendations cover the areas most in need of change, Rousselot says.

One of the proposals would set the maximum benefit for temporary total disability at two-thirds of the average weekly industrial wage. This would represent about a 12 per cent increase in the present maximum compensation of $95 per week.

Rousselot says several other states now use this formula for determining the rate of compensation.

The committee also proposed changes in two areas that would eliminate some employers exemptions from carrying workmen's compensation.

These would take off the limitations on the number of employes, 7, and the amount of payroll, $2,500 per year, which now exempt employers from the requirement to carry coverage.

Under the changes, any employer, no matter how few persons he employs, would have to provide them with coverage if his annual payroll is more than $1,000.

The third important recommendation for updating Missouri's laws deals with rehabilitation of disabled workers.

Committee member Grover Field, treasurer of the Missouri State Labor Council, says this is the most important area of workmen's compensation. He says the emphasis by the federal government is now on vocational, as well as physical rehabilitation.

Field says the emphasis should be toward "giving a person the confidence that they can do a job even though they've been hurt and laid off."

Missouri law now provides for physical rehabilitation, but offers nothing in the area of vocational rehabilitation.

Another federal recommendation Field stresses is the development of a method to speed claim settlements.

Because of unclear definitions on what exactly constitutes a "work related" injury, Field says there is often a long delay between the time a claim is filed and the time the injured worker is paid.

O'Connor says the most frequently heard complaints in the committee's hearings since January have been about the promptness of claim settlements.

"People feel they are put off," O'Connor says. "They have to wait until they are desperate, and consequently they settle for less than they feel they are entitled to."

One solution the committee studied was the California system of workmen's compensation.

In California, both the worker and the employer pay into a fund, and when the worker is injured, he gets paid immediately following his claim. The decision on whether his injury was "work related" does not effect the fact that he gets paid.

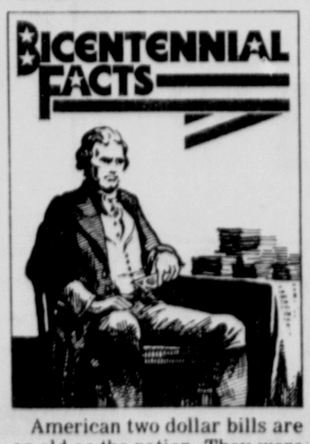
Another recommendation was made to add two administrative law judges and one legal advisor to the staff of the Division of Workmen's Compensation.

Rousselot says this would ease the work load on the present staff at a cost of about $50,000 per year. He says the division's funds are in good shape and could easily accommodate the added staff.

The Division of Workmen's Compensation operates on funds raised by a three per cent tax on workmen's compensation insurance policies.

Also recommended was a measure which would require employers to give notice of the reason for termination of disability payments within seven days after termination.

Under present law, no notice is required.



American two dollar bills are as old as the nation. They were first authorized by the Continental Congress in June 1776 as "bills of credit for the defense of America." Some 49,000 two dollars bills were circulated, and ran into trouble. Inflation so plagued the colonies during the Revolutionary War that nobody wanted paper money of any denomination, and "not worth a Continental" became a catchphrase for paper money issued by the Continental Congress, The World Almanac notes.

Some questions are answered for Troy

SUMMARY

Tragedy has struck Rainbow's End once more. Troy sat down and compiled a list and has decided that Luke has been hired by Jud Turner to drive the women away from the farm.

Then, to top it all off, she is awakened in the middle of the night by Jo, who tells her Amos has found Jud dead in the pig lot.

By CHERIE BLANTON

Troy rose late the next morning, and going to the medicine chest she immediately took two aspirin for the headache that was still hammering away at her temples.

Never, she thought, never in all the years I've lived have I ever gone through such an experience as last night's turned out to be. Michael arriving with the same two deputies he had brought with him earlier that afternoon— the ambulance following close behind.

The headlights of the cars being turned in the direction of the hog lot in order for the men to see what they were doing, and one of the deputies getting violently ill when the beams fell on Jud's corpse exposing the horrible way the pigs had mutilated it. The other sisters and Louise finally awakened by all the racket, and Stacy fainting while Sam stood by silently weeping, and Louise, ashen-faced, said nothing.

Then, after Jud had been taken away and the police had again searched the lot for anything that might have been missed in the shuffle, they came inside and Bertha served coffee to everyone while Troy went and got her two lists and gave them to Michael to read.

He seemed to think she was probably right in her assumptions, and surprisingly enough he read her solution aloud to everyone. After much discussion and arguing they all had to agree that it really did seem to make some sense, and so far, the only sense one could make out of this whole sordid mess.

Only Bertha, loyal to the very end, refused to believe that Luke would do those terrible things Troy had him doing, and in fact, she got so angry at the accusations that leaving the others to pour their own coffee if more was needed, she left in a huff and went back to her own cabin.

At last the men departed, and heavy of heart, the sisters and their guest once more climbed the stairs and went back to bed just as dawn was breaking in the sky.

No wonder my head is splitting, she thought, and as if he sensed her distress the little poodle hobbled over to where she stood gazing out of her window and pressed himself against her leg.

"Oh Ta," she whispered, bending down to pick him up and hold him close against her, "Ta, could Luke really be as bad as I'm making him out to be?" Huge tears begin rolling down her cheeks. "Who else could do those awful things if not Luke— unless of course it could have been Randy." She hastily set the dog down and finished dressing.

What if I'm all wrong— what if Randy were the culprit and Luke found out and accused him of frightening us and Randy tried to kill Luke. Of course, that's it— why was I so blind and stupid and hung up on Luke? I must tell Michael for that would also explain the attack on Jud last night, and almost running from the room she hurried down the stairs and into the living room to telephone the Sheriff.

However, when she dialed his office she found he was at the hospital, and wanting to talk with him before he could repeat her damaging solution to anyone else, she grabbed her handbag and started for the door as Stacy called out, "Where are you going?"

"To the hospital. Michael is there and I want to talk to him. I think I may have been all wrong about Luke."

"It's high time you figured that out— some days certain people acts like they got no sense at all." Bertha appeared at the doorway of her kitchen. "Wait just a minute, and I'll send you with a thermos of coffee."

A peace truce, thought Troy, smiling and delighted to accept, for she was quite fond of the old cook and former playmate.

"I'm going with you," announced Stacy, "I want to look in on him and see if he's any better, I'm like Bertha, I think he's as innocent as a new born lamb."

She gave her sister a scathing look.

"And then I thought I'd spend the day with Sidney. I know Jud was a horror, but still, he was his brother and this can't but have upset him all over again." Taking the thermos Bertha proffered, they left the house and were soon on their way to the hospital.

"One of these days, if you don't slow down," warned Stacy, "you're going to be going to the hospital and it won't be in this old car."

But ignoring her sister, who chose to remain quiet for the rest of the trip, Troy soon had them pulling into the parking lot of the building.

"There's Michael's car," pointed out Troy as they were parking, "good— I've caught him here after all." Both ladies alighted and made their way inside. Leading the way, Stacy directed them to Sidney's room just as the sheriff and Sidney's doctor were coming out.

"Oh no," cried out Stacy, "have you told him yet? I so wanted to be here with him when you did." And she nervously wrung her hands.

"It's all right," the doctor assured her, "in fact, I believe Jud's death is the best thing that could have happened to the man. He's been under his older brother's tyrannical influence for so long, that although he was sorry to hear he was dead, he was at the same time relieved of a great nervous pressure."

"I didn't tell him Jud was found in the hog lot." Michael told the women, "Time enough for that later. I only told him he was found dead at your place, that he had evidently been hit over the head by some heavy instrument, probably that iron bar of Amos' he occassionally uses on the hogs, and I did tell him he had been dressed in a Confederate uniform."

"What did he say?" asked Troy.

"Let's go back in and let him tell them himself," said the doctor, "he will be much relieved when he's confessed everything to them, particularly to Stacy."

"Confessed!" she burst out, "Oh no— what has Sidney had to do with all of this?"

"I think it's high time we found out!" Troy grimly pushed against the door and walked in to confront Sidney lying propped up in his bed.

He seemed to flinch when his eyes fell on Troy, and then spying Stacy directly behind her, he ducked his head and muttered, "I suppose the Sheriff has told you everything."

"No," Michael came through the door, "I thought perhaps you'd prefer doing that yourself, sir."

"Not really," admitted Sidney, straightening his shoulders and drawing a deep breath, "but having you tell them would be the coward's way out, and I guess I've had enough of being that sort of a person already." He looked pleadingly at Troy, "Do you think it's true about not being able to teach an old dog new tricks?"

Troy shook her head, "Not if the old dog feels he has something worth changing them for." She glanced meaningfully at Stacy who had gone to him and taken one of his hands in hers.

"Sidney," she pleaded, "it's unimportant— don't upset yourself any further."

"No, I have to tell you— both of you." And lifting his head, he began. "You know how Jud has always been crazy on the subject of that land that lies between the farms. Well, after his stroke this obsession seemed to get worse and worse. "Then, he sighed and looked at Stacy, he found out that I was coming over to your place and courting you, and he got real excited— he felt like this was the perfect opportunity to get his hands on your place. At the time I didn't know it, but he had gotten together with that Randy Weaks, and was paying him to break down the fences, burn the barn, all those little accidents he felt would wear Jo's resistance down and get her to sell to him since he was about to become one of the family."

"When did you figure out what was going on?" asked Troy.

"The night you were frightened by something in the conservatory. I had gone to my bedroom when I thought I heard a door slam somewhere," he paused, his eyes taking on a distant look, "I glanced out my window and saw Jud in, of all things, an old Confederate uniform cutting through the trees and headed toward your place. I had already begun to wonder if he weren't responsible for some of the problems that were going on over there, because twice in the last three weeks I had come across that Weaks man slipping around behind some of our outbuildings. So, I quietly let myself out of the house and followed him."

He turned to Stacy, "Would you mind handing me a glass of water— all this talking has made me dreadfully thirsty?" She nodded and after drinking some, he began again.

"He had gotten a fairly good head start, but being sure of where he was headed, I didn't waste much time getting there behind him. He must have heard Troy coming around the house with Ta, for I saw him slip into the conservatory right before she came into my sight."

He laughed bitterly. "I imagine it was as much a shock to him, as it was to her when she entered there, so to scare her away before she could see who it was, he ran out at her screaming and naturally she took off."

"I'd like to know who wouldn't have run with that thing screeching in their face," she said defensively.

"Right," Sidney agreed, "and then you fell and Jud ran out with Ta Ta right on his heels." He smiled ruefully, "I grabbed the dog as he ran past me— I was afraid Jud would harm him if I didn't." He looked at Troy. "I've known all along why he didn't like me. He was trying to protect you, and I wouldn't let him. I'm afraid I made him quite angry in fact."

"I knew there was something." Troy declared, "Ta Ta never dislikes anyone without a reason." She smiled at Sidney, forgiving him. "I want to thank you for saving Ta, even if he didn't understand himself what you were doing."

"I released him when I heard the others coming, and then I made my way home and confronted Jud with all I knew or had guessed. He got so angry I thought for a minute he was going to have another stroke— then he threatened to tell you all that I had been a part of the whole scheme and had even asked Stacy to marry me only to get my hands on the land, and weakling that I was, I let his threats influence me and keep me quiet."

"Oh Sidney," protested Stacy, "never in a minute would I have believed all those horrible things about you— never."

"But they're true," Sidney cried rising up in bed, "I'm just as guilty as Jud and Randy are for keeping still all this time, when I knew what they were doing."

"What about Annie and Luke?" asked Troy, her face set and still.

"Annie?" he looked puzzled, "I don't know anything about Old Annie, and Luke— I don't know why he should have wanted to harm the boy. I tried to ask him what was going on yesterday when he came to my hospital room, but my mind was so fuzzy from the drugs they had given me, and Jud was so angry about something," he looked at each of them questioningly, "I'd forgotten that— he was simply furious by the time he had arrived here, and then he stormed at me for being so weak and having a heart flare up at the sight of Luke." He paused a moment, "Sheriff, perhaps what he was so mad about had something to do with his death."

"Did you ask him if he had tried to kill Luke?" persisted Troy.

"Yes— or I said something to that effect, and he shouted out at me, called me a stupid—" here Sidney paused a moment and clearing his throat he apologized, "ass."

"So then you don't know if he had anything to do with the attack on Luke or not?" puzzled Troy.

"No— as mean as he was I somehow can't see him murdering anyone— I'd like to think he wouldn't anyway." He sighed and rubbed a hand over his brow, "Perhaps I'm just deluding myself—I seem to be good at that."

"I believe we all need to leave and let Mr. Turner rest," announced the doctor. "He's had quite enough for one day."

"Wait," cried Sidney, "I want you both to know, and Jo and Sam as well, that I take complete responsibility for all that's happened. I want to pay for my crime, and Stacy— I never once courted you for Jud's sake, or in the hope of getting any of that dreadful land. I simply fell in love with you the day you flattened me on the sidewalk," he put his head in his hands, "and look at all the grief I brought to you and your family."

"Sidney, I know that, and it's not your fault. This doesn't change anything for me— nothing at all." She smiled brightly, "Now you're all alone and I know you really need me." And she beamed at all of them.

"Yes, it does my dear." He smiled and patted her hand, "Even if you were enough of an angel to want to still marry me, I'm afraid we wouldn't have much of a honeymoon in prison."

"Prison!" she gasped, "what does he mean Michael?"

"Well, I guess technically he could be considered an accessory after the crimes that took place on your farm. He did have knowledge of what went on and he didn't report this to me. If any of you wanted to press charges, you probably could make them stick in a court of law."

"He's been punished enough," said Troy firmly, "no one is going to press charges. Now, I'm going home and start to clean up that conservatory. The sooner we have a happy wedding and dispel the gloom about the place the better I'll like it."

Noticing the glow on the two faces looking at her she motioned to Michael and the doctor, "let's go check on Luke and let these two visit together awhile."

Once in the corridor Troy questioned Michael, "Have you arrested Randy yet? I'll bet he was the one that killed Jud— probably had a falling out among thieves."

"I've already sent my men out to do that earlier— he should be safely locked up by now." He rubbed his chin thoughtfully, "but Miss Troy, I can't figure yet why Randy would try and kill Luke— it still doesn't make good sense."

"Oh," she responded, "Luke probably figured something out and let it slip unawares to Randy and he knew he had to get him out of the way before he realized what he knew. You, know I read a lot of murder mysteries, and sometimes the victims don't ever know what it is they've discovered, but the murderers are so afraid they might someday wake up to the truth, that they kill them before they have a chance to become aware of it— sort of like preventative medicine." and she smiled sweetly at the doctor. "By the way doctor, how is Luke today?"

He frowned, "No change, I'm beginning to be quite worried. If he doesn't show some response by tomorrow— well, I'm afraid he may never recover from his coma."

"How terrible." she cried just as one of Michael's deputies appeared at the end of the corridor.

"Sheriff— sheriff!" he called out, "We've searched everywhere, and that Randy Weaks seems to be completely gone from these parts."

Polish dull fridge with kitchen wax

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — My refrigerator stands right next to the stove. I always try to remember to wipe it off when I wash dishes, but sometimes I forget. One day, I really had to use some elbow grease and scouring powder. It dulled the enamel. Now any grease sticks like glue. I am afraid to use more scouring powder for fear all the enamel will come off. My refrigerator is 15 years old and I do not want to paint it. I wonder if there is any other solution to keep the grease from adhering. — MRS. W.O.

DEAR MRS. W.O. — After you get the refrigerator grease free by using a non-abrasive household cleaner, apply either kitchen or automobile wax. This should afford some protection from grease splatters. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — I am answering the reader who wanted to know how to treat feathers to be used for making pillows. I was the oldest of nine children. We had little money, so we ate lots of wild ducks and geese. Mom used the feathers to make pillows and feather beds. She did nothing to them. Only goose and duck feathers were ever used, since Mom thought the feathers from other birds were too stiff. The birds were dry picked from the necks down and any dirty or bloody feathers were discarded. The stiff wing and tail feathers were never used. Such feathers can be washed but do not dry in a dryer or the bright sunlight, since you do not want to draw the natural oils from the feathers. Ours lasted for years and I do not remember ever throwing any of them away. I think manufacturers now use chicken feathers that are chopped and curled. Mom turned her nose up at chicken feathers saying they were too heavy. — GRACE.

DEAR POLLY — When I prepare feathers to use in pillow, I pluck the wild birds dry and save only the softest of the feathers. If you scald the birds and the feathers are wet, it is easy to go on and wash them. Make a comfortably warm detergent suds in a large bucket, add feathers and squeeze around like fine washables. Squeeze out and put them in pail of clear warm rinse water. I pour feathers through a colander to get all the water out. After squeezing last of water out (out of doors) and pushing against bottom of the colander, I dump the feathers into an old pillowcase, fasten the top securely and hang on the clothesline, being sure to go out and fluff them up every so often. It usually takes two or three days of nice weather to completely dry them. I prefer putting fewer in a bag so I do not have to worry about mustiness if they are slow in drying. Strip feathers from quills if any are stiff so all is soft as down. — ELSIE.

Cocido hails from Spain

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Cocido, a Spanish soup-stew, has recently come into great favor at our house. Once you try it, you too may want to offer it regularly.

We enjoy serving Cocido for a light supper during the week or on Sunday. It's so easy to have ready, to heat and put on the table. With the Cocido you need lots of crusty bread and sweet butter; after it, salad and perhaps cheese, then dessert.

Yams or sweet potatoes are often used in Cocido and classic recipes call for adding them to the pot during the last 20 minutes or so of cooking. When we tried this, we found the solid pieces in the soup-stew stuck to the bottom of the pot. Now we steam the yams separately and add them along with their sweet juices. You'll find directions for doing this in the following recipe which is strictly our own version of the dish.

COCIDO U.S.A.

1½ pounds chuck beef for stew, 1-inch cubes
1 large (¾ to 1 pound) Spanish onion, coarsely chopped
2 medium carrots, pared and thinly sliced
1 can (1 pound) peeled plum tomatoes, undrained
2 tablespoons instant beef granules dissolved in 5 cups water
1 can (1 pound, 5 ounces) chick peas, undrained
¾ to 1 pound yams (pared and cut into 2-inch chunks), steamed according to note below
Salt and pepper to taste

In a 5-quart saucepot lightly brown the chorizo; remove with a slotted spoon. To drippings in saucepot add beef and brown briskly; just before beef has finished browning, add onion and stir to brown lightly. Add carrots, tomatoes and beef bouillon; simmer, covered, until beef is tender — about 1½ hours. Chill; remove some of the hardened fat according to the note below. Add chick peas and the steamed yams and their juices plus salt and pepper; reheat. Serve in large soup bowls as a main dish. Makes 6 servings.

Cultural series to be given at SeMo State

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The director of the Center for Middle Eastern Studies at the University of Chicago will give the next presentation in the cultural programs series at Southeast Missouri State University.

Dr. Marvin Zonis, who lived for more than three years in the Middle East, will discuss that part of the world at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Little Theatre at Kent Library.

The program is open to faculty members and students of Southeast Missouri State and to members of the Cape Girardeau Community Concert Association. Members of similar associations in communities which have reciprocal agreements with the Cape group may also attend.

There are no reserved seats and no individual tickets will be sold.

Zonis is chairman of the Joint Committee on the Middle East of the American Council of Learned Societies and the Social Science Research Council, and is a past president of the American Institute of Iranian Studies.

Also an associate professor of behavioral and social sciences at Chicago, Zonis has degrees from Yale University, Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He is author of "The Political Elite of Iran", "High Education and Social Change in the Middle East" and numerous other monographs and articles on the Middle East, psychology and politics.

Prison site audit begins

By Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Auditor George Lehr's investigation of the state's handling of land intended for a medium-security prison in the Kansas City area has begun, and Lehr said he hopes to finish it before the general election.

The proposed prison site near Grandview was abandoned under orders of Gov. Christopher Bond when the public reacted negatively to it. A trust account of $100,000 intended to pay for expenses and to be applied to the purchase of the property may not be recovered entirely by the state.

Lehr has hired a private lawyer, Jim Shoemake of St. Louis, to help him in the investigation. Lehr said he plans to invite about 16 people to discuss numerous questions about procedures in attempting to purchase the land.

Lehr says the investigation will be conducted privately unless one of the 16 people refuses to talk voluntarily. In that case, Lehr will subpoena that witness and the discussion will be public.

Lehr said he hopes the investigation will be completed by Oct. 25. He plans to release the results at that time, possibly including some transcripts of the testimony.

Lehr told reporters he will make every effort to keep the inquiry nonpartisan since the election is so close at hand. He says he has no idea whether the matter will damage Bond's re-election campaign.

Shoemake has contributed money to Bond's opponent, Joseph Teasdale, and also supported Ed Dowd, Bond's opponent in 1972. Although his St. Louis law firm does employ Republicans, Shoemake acknowledged that it is prominent in Democratic politics, since James Symington's brother is one of the major partners.

Commission reaffirms view on blind trusts

The Missouri Elections Commission has reaffirmed its earlier position on blind trusts and will not require disclosure of any holdings within such a trust this election year.

That comes as a major disappointment to Teasdale, who long has criticized Bond for keeping most of his personal wealth in such a trust.

The commission did advance a rule it already had adopted, requiring a statement from any candidate with a blind trust to reveal what originally was placed in it, any additions made to it and whether the candidate knows what is in it now.

Bond disclosed his trust's original holdings when he ran for governor in 1972.

Some questions are answered for Troy

SUMMARY

Tragedy has struck Rainbow's End once more. Troy sat down and compiled a list and has decided that Luke has been hired by Jud Turner to drive the women away from the farm.

Then, to top it all off, she is awakened in the middle of the night by Jo, who tells her Amos has found Jud dead in the pig lot.

By CHERIE BLANTON

Troy rose late the next morning, and going to the medicine chest she immediately took two aspirin for the headache that was still hammering away at her temples.

Never, she thought, never in all the years I've lived have I ever gone through such an experience as last night's turned out to be. Michael arriving with the same two deputies he had brought with him earlier that afternoon— the ambulance following close behind.

The headlights of the cars being turned in the direction of the hog lot in order for the men to see what they were doing, and one of the deputies getting violently ill when the beams fell on Jud's corpse exposing the horrible way the pigs had mutilated it. The other sisters and Louise finally awakened by all the racket, and Stacy fainting while Sam stood by silently weeping, and Louise, ashen-faced, said nothing.

Then, after Jud had been taken away and the police had again searched the lot for anything that might have been missed in the shuffle, they came inside and Bertha served coffee to everyone while Troy went and got her two lists and gave them to Michael to read.

He seemed to think she was probably right in her assumptions, and surprisingly enough he read her solution aloud to everyone. After much discussion and arguing they all had to agree that it really did seem to make some sense, and so far, the only sense one could make out of this whole sordid mess.

Only Bertha, loyal to the very end, refused to believe that Luke would do those terrible things Troy had him doing, and in fact, she got so angry at the accusations that leaving the others to pour their own coffee if more was needed, she left in a huff and went back to her own cabin.

At last the men departed, and heavy of heart, the sisters and their guest once more climbed the stairs and went back to bed just as dawn was breaking in the sky.

No wonder my head is splitting, she thought, and as if he sensed her distress the little poodle hobbled over to where she stood gazing out of her window and pressed himself against her leg.

"Oh Ta," she whispered, bending down to pick him up and hold him close against her, "Ta, could Luke really be as bad as I'm making him out to be?" Huge tears begin rolling down her cheeks. "Who else could do those awful things if not Luke— unless of course it could have been Randy." She hastily set the dog down and finished dressing.

What if I'm all wrong— what if Randy were the culprit and Luke found out and accused him of frightening us and Randy tried to kill Luke. Of course, that's it— why was I so blind and stupid and hung up on Luke? I must tell Michael for that would also explain the attack on Jud last night, and almost running from the room she hurried down the stairs and into the living room to telephone the Sheriff.

However, when she dialed his office she found he was at the hospital, and wanting to talk with him before he could repeat her damaging solution to anyone else, she grabbed her handbag and started for the door as Stacy called out, "Where are you going?"

"To the hospital. Michael is there and I want to talk to him. I think I may have been all wrong about Luke."

"It's high time you figured that out— some days certain people acts like they got no sense at all." Bertha appeared at the doorway of her kitchen. "Wait just a minute, and I'll send you with a thermos of coffee."

A peace truce, thought Troy, smiling and delighted to accept, for she was quite fond of the old cook and former playmate.

"I'm going with you," announced Stacy, "I want to look in on him and see if he's any better, I'm like Bertha, I think he's as innocent as a new born lamb."

She gave her sister a scathing look.

"And then I thought I'd spend the day with Sidney. I know Jud was a horror, but still, he was his brother and this can't but have upset him all over again." Taking the thermos Bertha proffered, they left the house and were soon on their way to the hospital.

"One of these days, if you don't slow down," warned Stacy, "you're going to be going to the hospital and it won't be in this old car."

But ignoring her sister, who chose to remain quiet for the rest of the trip, Troy soon had them pulling into the parking lot of the building.

"There's Michael's car," pointed out Troy as they were parking, "good— I've caught him here after all." Both ladies alighted and made their way inside. Leading the way, Stacy directed them to Sidney's room just as the sheriff and Sidney's doctor were coming out.

"Oh no," cried out Stacy, "have you told him yet? I so wanted to be here with him when you did." And she nervously wrung her hands.

"It's all right," the doctor assured her, "in fact, I believe Jud's death is the best thing that could have happened to the man. He's been under his older brother's tyrannical influence for so long, that although he was sorry to hear he was dead, he was at the same time relieved of a great nervous pressure."

"I didn't tell him Jud was found in the hog lot." Michael told the women, "Time enough for that later. I only told him he was found dead at your place, that he had evidently been hit over the head by some heavy instrument, probably that iron bar of Amos' he occassionally uses on the hogs, and I did tell him he had been dressed in a Confederate uniform."

"What did he say?" asked Troy.

"Let's go back in and let him tell them himself, ' said the doctor, "he will be much relieved when he's confessed everything to them, particularly to Stacy."

"Confessed!" she burst out, "Oh no— what has Sidney had to do with all of this?"

"I think it's high time we found out!" Troy grimly pushed against the door and walked in to confront Sidney lying propped up in his bed.

He seemed to flinch when his eyes fell on Troy, and then spying Stacy directly behind her, he ducked his head and muttered, "I suppose the Sheriff has told you everything."

"No," Michael came through the door, "I thought perhaps you'd prefer doing that yourself, sir."

"Not really," admitted Sidney, straightening his shoulders and drawing a deep breath, "but having you tell them would be the coward's way out, and I guess I've had enough of being that sort of a person already." He looked pleadingly at Troy, "Do you think it's true about not being able to teach an old dog new tricks?"

Troy shook her head, "Not if the old dog feels he has something worth changing them for." She glanced meaningfully at Stacy who had gone to him and taken one of his hands in hers.

"Sidney," she pleaded, "it's unimportant— don't upset yourself any further."

"No, I have to tell you— both of you." And lifting his head, he began. "You know how Jud has always been crazy on the subject of that land that lies between the farms. Well, after his stroke this obsession seemed to get worse and worse. "Then, he sighed and looked at Stacy, he found out that I was coming over to your place and courting you, and he got real excited— he felt like this was the perfect opportunity to get his hands on your place. At the time I didn't know it, but he had gotten together with that Randy Weaks, and was paying him to break down the fences, burn the barn, all those little accidents he felt would wear Jo's resistance down and get her to sell to him since he was about to become one of the family."

"When did you figure out what was going on?" asked Troy.

"The night you were frightened by something in the conservatory. I had gone to my bedroom when I thought I heard a door slam somewhere," he paused, his eyes taking on a distant look, "I glanced out my window and saw Jud in, of all things, an old Confederate uniform cutting through the trees and headed toward your place. I had already begun to wonder if he weren't responsible for some of the problems that were going on over there, because twice in the last three weeks I had come across that Weaks man slipping around behind some of our outbuildings. So, I quietly let myself out of the house and followed him."

He turned to Stacy, "Would you mind handing me a glass of water— all this talking has made me dreadfully thirsty?" She nodded and after drinking some, he began again.

"He had gotten a fairly good head start, but being sure of where he was headed, I didn't waste much time getting there behind him. He must have heard Troy coming around the house with Ta, for I saw him slip into the conservatory right before she came into my sight."

He laughed bitterly. "I imagine it was as much a shock to him, as it was to her when she entered there, so to scare her away before she could see who it was, he ran out at her screaming and naturally she took off."

"I'd like to know who wouldn't have run with that thing screeching in their face," she said defensively.

"Right," Sidney agreed, "and then you fell and Jud ran out with Ta Ta right on his heels." He smiled ruefully, "I grabbed the dog as he ran past me— I was afraid Jud would harm him if I didn't." He looked at Troy. "I've known all along why he didn't like me. He was trying to protect you, and I wouldn't let him. I'm afraid I made him quite angry in fact."

"I knew there was something." Troy declared, "Ta Ta never dislikes anyone without a reason." She smiled at Sidney, forgiving him. "I want to thank you for saving Ta, even if he didn't understand himself what you were doing."

"I released him when I heard the others coming, and then I made my way home and confronted Jud with all I knew or had guessed. He got so angry I thought for a minute he was going to have another stroke— then he threatened to tell you all that I had been a part of the whole scheme and had even asked Stacy to marry me only to get my hands on the land, and weakling that I was, I let his threats influence me and keep me quiet."

"Oh Sidney," protested Stacy, "never in a minute would I have believed all those horrible things about you— never."

"But they're true," Sidney cried rising up in bed, "I'm just as guilty as Jud and Randy are for keeping still all this time, when I knew what they were doing."

"What about Annie and Luke?" asked Troy, her face set and still.

"Annie?" he looked puzzled, "I don't know anything about Old Annie, and Luke— I don't know why he should have wanted to harm the boy. I tried to ask him what was going on yesterday when he came to my hospital room, but my mind was so fuzzy from the drugs they had given me, and Jud was so angry about something," he looked at each of them questioningly, "I'd forgotten that— he was simply furious by the time he had arrived here, and then he stormed at me for being so weak and having a heart flare up at the sight of Luke." He paused a moment, "Sheriff, perhaps what he was so mad about had something to do with his death."

"Did you ask him if he had tried to kill Luke?" persisted Troy.

"Yes— or I said something to that effect, and he shouted out at me, called me a stupid—" here Sidney paused a moment and clearing his throat he apologized, "ass."

"So then you don't know if he had anything to do with the attack on Luke or not?" puzzled Troy.

"No— as mean as he was I somehow can't see him murdering anyone— I'd like to think he wouldn't anyway." He sighed and rubbed a hand over his brow, "Perhaps I'm just deluding myself—I seem to be good at that."

"I believe we all need to leave and let Mr. Turner rest," announced the doctor. "He's had quite enough for one day."

"Wait," cried Sidney, "I want you both to know, and Jo and Sam as well, that I take complete responsibility for all that's happened. I want to pay for my crime, and Stacy— I never once courted you for Jud's sake, or in the hope of getting any of that dreadful land. I simply fell in love with you the day you flattened me on the sidewalk," he put his head in his hands, "and look at all the grief I brought to you and your family."

"Sidney, I know that, and it's not your fault. This doesn't change anything for me— nothing at all." She smiled brightly, "Now you're all alone and I know you really need me." And she beamed at all of them.

"Yes, it does my dear." He smiled and patted her hand, "Even if you were enough of an angel to want to still marry me, I'm afraid we wouldn't have much of a honeymoon in prison."

"Prison!" she gasped, "what does he mean Michael?"

"Well, I guess technically he could be considered an accessory after the crimes that took place on your farm. He did have knowledge of what went on and he didn't report this to me. If any of you wanted to press charges, you probably could make them stick in a court of law."

"He's been punished enough," said Troy firmly, "no one is going to press charges. Now, I'm going home and start to clean up that conservatory. The sooner we have a happy wedding and dispel the gloom about the place the better I'll like it."

Noticing the glow on the two faces looking at her she motioned to Michael and the doctor, "let's go check on Luke and let these two visit together awhile."

Once in the corridor Troy questioned Michael, "Have you arrested Randy yet? I'll bet he was the one that killed Jud— probably had a falling out among thieves."

"I've already sent my men out to do that earlier— he should be safely locked up by now." He rubbed his chin thoughtfully, "but Miss Troy, I can't figure yet why Randy would try and kill Luke— it still doesn't make good sense."

"Oh," she responded, "Luke probably figured something out and let it slip unawares to Randy and he knew he had to get him out of the way before he realized what he knew. You, know I read a lot of murder mysteries, and sometimes the victims don't ever know what it is they've discovered, but the murderers are so afraid they might someday wake up to the truth, that they kill them before they have a chance to become aware of it— sort of like preventative medicine." and she smiled sweetly at the doctor. "By the way doctor, how is Luke today?"

He frowned, "No change, I'm beginning to be quite worried. If he doesn't show some response by tomorrow— well, I'm afraid he may never recover from his coma."

"How terrible." she cried just as one of Michael's deputies appeared at the end of the corridor.

"Sheriff— sheriff!" he called out, "We've searched everywhere, and that Randy Weaks seems to be completely gone from these parts."

(To be continued Wednesday.)

Polish dull fridge with kitchen wax

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — My refrigerator stands right next to the stove. I always try to remember to wipe it off when I wash dishes, but sometimes I forget. One day, I really had to use some elbow grease and scouring powder. It dulled the enamel. Now any grease sticks like glue. I am afraid to use more scouring powder for fear all the enamel will come off. My refrigerator is 15 years old and I do not want to paint it. I wonder if there is any other solution to keep the grease from adhering. — MRS. W.O.

DEAR MRS. W.O. — After you get the refrigerator grease free by using a non-abrasive household cleaner, apply either kitchen or automobile wax. This should afford some protection from grease splatters. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — I am answering the reader who wanted to know how to treat feathers to be used for making pillows. I was the oldest of nine children. We had little money, so we ate lots of wild ducks and geese. Mom used the feathers to make pillows and feather beds. She did nothing to them. Only goose and duck feathers were ever used, since Mom thought the feathers from other birds were too stiff. The birds were dry picked from the necks down and any dirty or bloody feathers were discarded. The stiff wing and tail feathers were never used. Such feathers can be washed but do not dry in a dryer or the bright sunlight, since you do not want to draw the natural oils from the feathers. Ours lasted for years and I do not remember ever throwing any of them away. I think manufacturers now use chicken feathers that are chopped and curled. Mom turned her nose up at chicken feathers saying they were too heavy. — GRACE.

DEAR POLLY — When I prepare feathers to use in pillow, I pluck the wild birds dry and save only the softest of the feathers. If you scald the birds and the feathers are wet, it is easy to go on and wash them. Make a comfortably warm detergent suds in a large bucket, add feathers and squeeze around like fine washables. Squeeze out and put them in pail of clear warm rinse water. I pour feathers through a colander to get all the water out. After squeezing last of water out (out of doors) and pushing against bottom of the colander, I dump the feathers into an old pillowcase, fasten the top securely and hang on the clothesline, being sure to go out and fluff them up every so often. It usually takes two or three days of nice weather to completely dry them. I prefer putting fewer in a bag so I do not have to worry about mustiness if they are slow in drying. Strip feathers from quills if any are stiff so all is soft as down. — ELSIE.

Polly will send you one of her "peachy" thank-you cards, ideal for framing or placing in your family scrapbook, if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

Cocido hails from Spain

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Cocido, a Spanish soup-stew, has recently come into great favor at our house. Once you try it, you too may want to offer it regularly.

We enjoy serving Cocido for a light supper during the week or on Sunday. It's so easy to have ready, to heat and put on the table. With the Cocido you need lots of crusty bread and sweet butter; after it, salad and perhaps cheese, then dessert.

Yams or sweet potatoes are often used in Cocido and classic recipes call for adding them to the pot during the last 20 minutes or so of cooking. When we tried this, we found the solid pieces in the soup-stew stuck to the bottom of the pot. Now we steam the yams separately and add them along with their sweet juices. You'll find directions for doing this in the following recipe which is strictly our own version of the dish.

COCIDO U.S.A.

1½ pounds chuck beef for stew, 1-inch cubes
1 large (¾ to 1 pound) Spanish onion, coarsely chopped
2 medium carrots, pared and thinly sliced
1 can (1 pound) peeled plum tomatoes, undrained
2 tablespoons instant beef granules dissolved in 5 cups water
1 can (1 pound, 5 ounces) chick peas, undrained
¾ to 1 pound yams (pared and cut into 2-inch chunks), steamed according to note below
Salt and pepper to taste

In a 5-quart saucepot lightly brown the chorizo; remove with a slotted spoon. To drippings in saucepot add beef and brown briskly; just before beef has finished browning, add onion and stir to brown lightly. Add carrots, tomatoes and beef bouillon; simmer, covered, until beef is tender — about 1½ hours. Chill; remove some of the hardened fat according to the note below. Add chick peas and the steamed yams and their juices plus salt and pepper; reheat. Serve in large soup bowls as a main dish. Makes 6 servings.

PUT YOUR MILITARY EXPERIENCE TO WORK PART-TIME.

If you're out of the service, the Army Reserve is a great way to get back in, part-time. And make good extra money at a job you already know. And can do best. With promotions and many of the excellent fringe benefits military service has to offer. See your local Army Reserve unit for details.

Save 15¢ on Zest® and feel like a million.

Try Zest® and save 15¢ when you buy any 3 bars.

If you'd like to feel a little richer and cleaner, take the coupon attached on the right to your store. You'll save 15¢. But what's more important is how Zest lets you step out of the shower refreshed, feeling cleaner than you did with regular soap.

You see, Zest isn't like regular soap. Zest has special rinsing agents not found in soap. It doesn't leave a sticky soap film on your skin so you feel cleaner, really fresh— like a million.

State funds, planning needed in pre-schools

JEFFERSON CITY — A report prepared for the Governor's Conference on Education recommends increased statewide planning and funding of education and services related to pre-school children and their parents.

The "Early Childhood and Parent Education" recommendations will be considered by the 700-member governor's conference when it convenes Dec. 2 in Columbia.

The conference, established by Gov. Christopher S. Bond, is charged with recommending goals for education in Missouri which will serve as a basis of direction for public education during the next quarter century.

The conference, chaired by Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps, will consider recommendations in four other areas of concentration — educational finance, governance, accountability and vocational education.

In the area of early childhood and parent education, the steering committee's recommendations concentrate on programs educating both the pre-school child and his parent.

The report calls for the establishment and implementation of a statewide plan for services related to the development and learning of children from birth to age six.

This plan would be developed through the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, and would include all agencies having responsibility for services to young children. It would be used to avoid duplication and fragmentation of services and to provide for greater equalization of services throughout the state, the report says.

The state education department would be responsible for coordinating these agencies, but would not be responsible for creating new services or agencies.

The report also suggests that the state department of education begin a statewide media campaign intended to create public awareness and educate parents on the importance of early childhood learning.

The School Foundation Formula should be revised to fund parent and child education programs and services, and make them available to families with children from birth to age five, the report says. This also would include early childhood special education programs.

"It should be noted that assisting parents in fostering the child's development and learning in the home can be done for little cost as compared to programs in an institutional setting," the report says. "Parent and child early education can also prevent far more costly remediation later."

Both elementary and secondary schools should be required to offer courses in family life education, the report recommends.

In addition, junior and senior high schools should offer courses in prenatal and child growth and development. All in-school expectant parents should be required to take the courses, the report recommends.

The report pointed out that one of every 10 17-year-old girls is a mother. These teenage parents need immediate guidance in becoming effective parents, the report says.

But all students can benefit from training of this sort, the report states.

"Parent education can prepare teenagers to anticipate the requirements and demands of child rearing and, it is hoped, help to stem the incidents of infanticide and child abuse," the report says.

The report also recommended that schools provide adult education in prenatal development, child care and parenting skills as a community service.

In addition, teachers should be provided with pre-service and in-service training in these areas, and in working effectively with parents concerning these areas.

Finally, the report says the state should provide aid for full-day kindergarten programs on the same basis that state aid is provided for other regular programs.
